

MUST DISPOSE OF MANY BILLS BEFORE MONDAY

House Must Clean Up Bills Originating There; and Senate Likewise

DIVISIONS ON INCREASE

Few Nonpartisans and Independents Both Break Away on Important Bills

RECOMMENDS PASSAGE

When the report of the elections committee of the house was submitted this afternoon on S. B. 233, the bill providing for non-party state election ballots, a motion to indefinitely postpone the bill lost 34 to 88 with one absent.

Independent members of the committee recommended the bill for passage with amendments. The Nonpartisan minority of the committee recommended indefinite postponement with one exception. The lineup was strictly on party lines.

The elections committee divided on S. B. 233, the non-party state election bill, which may be reported today. The majority agreed on a petition for Sunday for a state office instead of 10 percent; permitting designation of party principles by five words instead of three; providing that no designation or statement of principles may be used unless authorized by a state-wide convention with delegates from all parts of the state; permitting the convention to authorize use of designations or statements of principle by campaign committees; and permitting legislative district conventions to choose designations for candidates.

The house voted in favor of the minority appropriations committee report of $60,000 to complete the main building at the Dickinson normal.

AWAIT HIGHWAY BILL VOTE

H. B. 233, providing for abolition of the state highway commission, was expected to be reached on the question of final passage in the house late today.

The house this morning accepted the unanimous report to kill H. B. 192, which re-wrote the workmen's compensation law, providing for a new commission, new schedule of rates and providing compensation insurance for employees instead of by the state fund. A divided report will be made on the Rustad bill, to permit employers to carry insurance either in the state fund or with private companies.

The state legislature today was working at top speed to wade through the mass of bills which must be disposed of by Wednesday at 2 p. m.

Under the rules, the senate must dispose of all senate bills, and the house likewise of all house bills, by that time. After the fiftieth day the senate may consider only house bills and the house may consider only senate bills.

Another morning session was called today in the effort to clean up the business. The senate, being a smaller body, is in better shape. Lieut.-Gov. Hyland told the senate he anticipated no trouble in cleaning up the business of that body. Late yesterday the senate had but 44 bills in committee and had 50 bills on the calendar for action today.

The house had 100 bills which had not been acted upon. It took definite action on 20 bills yesterday but must increase this record today and Monday.

The battle-ground of the legislature in the last ten days probably will be in the house, because most of the important "administration measures" originated in the senate and will be passed there and sent to the house.

Fate Is Doubtful

The fate of "administration bills" is in doubt. The majority in the house has been pretty well shot, as evidenced by splits on important bills yesterday and the day previous. A defection of one or two votes from either majority or minority side makes a big difference.

Two Nonpartisans joined Independents in voting to pay the Bishop, Brissman audit bill, while two Independents joined the Nonpartisans to kill the bill reducing the 3-cent half tax to 1-cent an acre tax. Similar defection of Independents killed the bill to send the pool hall license funds back to the city.

Under this situation, and with appropriation bills for the various state institutions coming up and members looking forward to protecting their own communities in the way of appropriations, the economy program has a hard road.

League Tightens

The Nonpartisan opposition to anything generally called an administration measure has been well solidified in the last few days. The Nonpartisans have gone at it hammer and tongs in their caucuses, and the effect has been seen.

On the other hand, defection among a few Independents has grown more noticeable, occasioned in part by sectionalism, and in the opinion of some, the "quenching tactics" used earlier in the session have had good effect in one or two instances but an adverse effect in other instances.

LABOR BODY URGES SCHOOL ON WEST SIDE

Bismarck Trades and Labor Assembly Takes Action on Proposition

A resolution supporting the bond issue for a new west side school has been adopted by the Bismarck Trades and Labor Assembly, which also has gone on record as opposing house Bill No. 163 which provides for abolition of many school holidays. The resolutions follow:

"Whereas there is an urgent need of a new school house on the west side of this city;

"For the reasons of the great distance the small children must go to the present schools and also for the reason of the crowded condition of all our present school buildings;

"And whereas the prices of labor and material are now at a lower level than there is any chance of them going to again for at least some time to come, there fore the tax payer will get his money's worth if a new school is built this year;

"Therefore be it resolved by The Bismarck Trades and Labor Assembly in regular meeting that we urge all Union Men and their friends to vote for the issuing of bonds for a new West Side School at the special election to be held February 20, 1923.

Unanimously adopted February 15, 1923.

THOMAS JENNINGS, Secretary.

Against H. B. 163

A resolution protesting against House Bill 163.

Whereas The Legislative assembly of the State of North Dakota has before it for passage a bill regulating school holidays known as House Bill 163 which makes Labor day a school day;

"And whereas Labor Day is a National holiday established by an act of congress, and is a holiday sacred to labor;

"And whereas under House Bill 163 the city school term will have to open on Labor Day the first Monday in September, and will thereby deprive the teachers from observing Labor Day and will keep children from taking part in Labor celebration, which they always take a prominent part in.

"And whereas house Bill 163 provides that an hour of school time shall be given over to exercises suitable to such holidays. But whereas school will be compelled to open on Labor Day no such exercises suitable to the spirit of Labor Day can be held, for there will be no time before hand to plan such exercises.

"And whereas said house bill does not respect the one International holiday the world has, which is Armistice Day.

"Therefore be it resolved by the Bismarck Trades and Labor Assembly in regular meeting, that we protest against the passage and approval of House Bill 163.

"Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the state senate.

Unanimously adopted February 15, 1923.

THOMAS JENNINGS, Secretary.

WAY CLEARED FOR REPEAL OF HOME BUILDERS

Senate Also Nears Final Vote on Mill and Elevator Manager Bill

BANK REPORT DIVIDED

Majority Report Favoring Bill to Repeal Guaranty Fund Act Accepted

The way was cleared in the North Dakota senate for final vote today on two of the most important measures urged by the state administrators. These were Senate Bill 277, which provides for the liquidation of the North Dakota Home Building association under the direction of the state industrial commission, and S. B. 280, which removes the control of the state mill and elevator association from the Industrial Commission and places it in the hands of a non-political board of managers.

Both measures were reported in to the senate on divided reports by the state affairs committee, the Independent majority of the committee recommending the passage of the bills and the Nonpartisan minority their indefinite postponement.

In both cases the majority reports were accepted by the senate the vote being along party lines. There was practically no debate in either case.

Accept Bank Report.

In the same way the senate accepted the report of the majority members of the committee on banks and banking which recommended for passage Senate Bill 365, the bill introduced by Senator Walter Bond for the repeal of the state guaranty of bank deposits effective July 1, 1934.

The vote on the measure was 13-14, along party lines. Its companion bill creating the office of supreme court commissioner, and giving that tribunal original jurisdiction for the liquidation of insolvent banks, was accepted for passage on a report of the same committee.

All of these measures will be on the calendar for third reading and final passage today.

Had the Ax Out.

At the same time the upper house of the legislature had its ax out during the yesterday afternoon session, and ruthlessly slaughtered a number of measures. One of these was Senate Bill 247, introduced by Senator Eastgate of Grand Forks, which would have repealed the present law requiring the union label to appear on state printing. The bill came in on a divided report from the committee on public printing. Senator Whitson of Grand Forks called for a roll call vote and the bill was killed, 32 to 17.

A good gist of bills was passed in the course of the afternoon. To the surprise of many the Tofurou bill, providing for a system of farm storage of grain, and the obtaining of loans thereon by warehouse receipts was passed by a vote of 32 to 17, without any particular opposition. The bill being made by the league senators, who had formerly favored a bill along similar lines introduced by Senator Hamilton.

Have New Bills.

It was found necessary in the course of the afternoon to appoint a committee on delayed bills, as four senators asked for the suspension of the rules to permit them to introduce measures. This committee will examine the bills in question and will report to the senate on the advisability of permitting their introduction. A two-thirds vote of the senate will be necessary, however, to obtain permission for the introduction of any measure.

Senator Whitman of Grand Forks gave notice of his desire to introduce a bill for the repeal of the present state licensing department, or pool hall inspection law. His bill is very similar to that which was killed in the house, but is slightly amended so that in Senator Whitman's opinion it is likely to pass the house if it first gets by the senate successfully. This is one of the bills which will go before the committee on delayed bills.

Minor Gets Appropriation.

Consideration of S. B. 70, for an act creating a new state fair at Minot and a $25,000 annual appropriation developed a hot argument over the values of fairs and the need of money. Senator Lynch started the fireworks by suggesting that the proper course for the senate to follow would be to eliminate appropriations to all the state fairs, Grand Forks, Fargo and Mandan, not to endow a new one. No party lines were drawn in the following debate, senators of either faction expressing themselves for or against the new fair appropriation. Etestad, Hamilton, Benson, Patten, all leaguers, Bond and others spoke for a "fair deal" for the northwest corner of the state with Levang, Olson, McMan, Ward, leaguers, and Page and Lynch, Independents, opposing a new appropriation. On the roll call the bill passed 33 to 14.

Senator Whitman's bill, originally drawn to define carnivals and regulate them, was passed as re-written. The measure now provides machinery by which officials or various communities are able to and are charged to enforce the law. It lays special stress on games of chance, lotteries and "all skin games" and provides a $50 to $500 penalty for operation of the same or for any persons participating in or responsible for any "for men only shows."

HOUSE VOTES TO PAY BILL OF AUDITORS

Bill Carrying Appropriation of $12,000 for Bishop, Brissman, Passes

KILL HAIL TAX CUT

Bill Would Have Reduced 3-Cent Flat Acreage Tax to One Cent an Acre

The house of representatives this afternoon voted to pay for the audit made by Bishop, Brissman and Company of the state industries which was the basis of the house investigation of 1921. The bill, appropriating $12,005.15, passed by a vote of 60 to 51.

Sharp debate between Independent and Nonpartisan league leaders preceded the vote, the debate being cut short when Rep. Twichell demanded the previous question and the Independents joined in the demand.

"This money is to pay for an audit conducted on a vote of the people, when they enacted an initiated law in 1921," Rep. Twichell said. "The Nonpartisans in control refused to provide the auditing board with the money to carry out this. A lot of money contributed money, I don't know who they are, and put it up as a bribe to get the bill passed."

Bishopman and Co. that the bill would be paid, Bishop, Brissman and Company have never been paid and we propose to pay them now.

"And I think the audit was worth the money."

Rep. Maddock, Nonpartisan, asserted the whole proceeding was irregular; Rep. Patterson declared the audit company had been paid and Rep. Vogel declared that "Mr. Twichell got himself in a whole and wants us to pull him out."

Rep. Twichell retorted to the thrust by declaring he spent one hundred dollars of his own money pump after the report during the 1921 session and he didn't ever expect to get it back, and didn't want to.

Clash on Hail Bill

In the second clash of the afternoon session, which was prolonged until 6 p. m., the house killed Rep. Peters' bill to reduce the flat acreage tax for the hail insurance department revolving fund from three cents an acre to one cent an acre. The "clincher" motion was applied, with two Independents joining the Nonpartisans to kill the bill.

Rep. Traynor, Ramsey county, pleading for the bill and declaring he was a farmer and always expected to be, and that the hail insurance fund already was large enough and that with "profit" made on delinquent taxes and a one-cent tax the fund soon would be large enough. The bill, he said, would save $540,000 taxes a year, and the legislature ought to effect the economy.

Rep. Maddock, Mountair, declared the farmers wanted a hail insurance fund big enough to take care of all losses promptly, and that opposition to the three-cent tax came from those who opposed hail insurance.

The vote to indefinitely postpone was 54 to 50. On accepting the report of the committee of the whole, a call of the house was demanded and the final vote was 57 to kill the bill and 54 against it, with two absent.

To Reconsider Bill

A motion to reconsider and decline to concur in senate amendments to house bill No. 8, the city zoning bill, was carried. The house had passed the bill applying to cities of 12,500 or over, the senate amended to include cities of 6,000 or over, and in this state the bill was indefinitely postponed yesterday. There had not been much objection to the bill when it passed the house, applying only to Fargo and Grand Forks.

The house passed H. B. 275, providing the Industrial Commission may negotiate sale of soldier bonus certificates. The effect of the bill, American Legion sponsors say, will be to lay the road open for a decision of the supreme court on any proposition which may be worked out providing for the sale of soldier bonus warrants.

Among the bills killed was one proposing to change the name of "North Dakota," by action of the delayed bills committee in refusing to permit it to be introduced, and a bill providing that legislative bills need be read the first time only by title.

A new bill was introduced by Rep. Hargrington requiring the Constitutions of the United States and state to be studied in schools and colleges. American principles taught, and a test required before graduation.

SHIP BILL BEFORE SENATE; FIGHT RESUMED

British Debt Fund Bill Goes to Conference After Vote

Washington, Feb. 17.—The administration shipping bill again held the center of attention in the senate after the passage last night of the British debt funding bill which now goes to conference. The shipping measure was restored to its position as the unfinished business of the senate by motion of Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, who has in charge after a move for adjournment by Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas.

This move was not regarded as a test of strength on the bill since a number of senators on both sides were absent. Senator Robertson abandoned his fight against Jones' motion when the latter assured him that he did not intend to proceed with his men as last night.

The shipping bill lost its status as the senate's unfinished business Monday after having held its place since Dec. 11, a parliamentary amendment giving the debt funding bill a clear way. The measure was accepted last night after 7 o'clock.

Little difficulty is expected in conference, the senate's action being regarded as bringing government approval of the settlement of the $4,000,000 British debt which was not affected by the amendment adopted.

MUST DISPOSE OF MANY BILLS BEFORE MONDAY

House Must Clean Up Bills Originating There; and Senate Likewise

DIVISIONS ON INCREASE

Few Nonpartisans and Independents Both Break Away on Important Bills

RECOMMENDS PASSAGE
When the report of the election committee of the house was submitted this afternoon on S. B. 233 the bill providing for non-party state election ballots a motion to indefinitely postpone the bill lost 51 to 58 with one absent.

Independent members of the committee recommended the bill for passage with amendments. The nonpartisan minority of the committee recommended indefinite postponement with one exception. The lineup was strictly on party lines.

The elections committee divided on S. B. 233, the non-party state election bill, which may be reported late today. The majority agreed on a petition for candidacy for a state office instead of 10 percent; permitting designation of party principles by five words instead of three; providing that no designation or statement or principles may be used unless authorized by a state-wide convention with delegates from two-thirds of the counties; permitting the conventions to authorize use of designations or statements of principle by campaign committees; and permitting legislative district conventions to choose designations for candidates.

The house voted in favor of the minority appropriations committee report of $60,000 to complete the main building at the Dickinson normal.

AWAIT HIGHWAY BILL VOTE
H. B. 233, providing for abolition of the state highway commission, was expected to be reached on the question of final passage in the house late today.

The house this morning accepted the unanimous report to kill H. B. 192, which re-wrote the workmen's compensation law, providing for a new commission, new schedule of rates and providing compensation insurance should be carried by private firms instead of by the state fund. A divided report will be made on the Rustad bill, to permit employers to carry insurance either in the state fund or with private companies.

The state legislature today was working at top speed to wade through the mass of bills which must be disposed of by Wednesday at 2 p. m.

Under the rules, the senate must dispose of all senate bills, and the house likewise of all house bills, by that time. After the fifty-first day the senate may consider only house bills and the house may consider only senate bills.

Another morning session was called today in the effort to clean up the business. The senate, being a smaller body, has better shape. Lieut.-Gov. Hyland told the senate he anticipated no trouble in cleaning up the business of that body. Late yesterday the senate had 44 bills in committee and had 60 bills on the calendar for action today.

The house had 100 bills which had not been acted upon. It took definite action on 20 bills yesterday but must increase this record today and Monday.

The battle-ground of the legislature in the last ten days probably will be in the house, because most of the important "administration measures" originated in the senate and will be passed there and sent to the house.

Fate is Doubtful
The fate of "administration bills" is in doubt. The majority in the house has been pretty well shot, as evidenced by splits on important bills yesterday and the day previous. A defection of one or two votes from either majority or minority side makes a big difference.

Two Nonpartisans joined Independents in voting to pay the Bishop, Brissman audit bill, while two Independents joined the Nonpartisans to kill the bill reducing the 3-cent hall tax to 1-cent an acre tax. Similar defection of Independents killed the bill to send the poll tax license funds back to the city.

Under this situation, and with appropriation bills for the various state institutions coming up and members looking forward to protecting their own communities in the way of appropriations, the economy program has a hard road.

League Tightens
The Nonpartisan opposition to anything generally called an administration measure has been well solidified in the last few days. The Nonpartisans have gone at it hammer and tongs in their caucuses, and the effect has been seen.

On the other hand the defection among a few Independents has grown more noticeable, occasioned in part by sectionalism, and in the opinion of some, the "squashing tactics" used earlier in the session have had good effect in one or two instances but an adverse effect in other instances.

LABOR BODY URGES SCHOOL ON WEST SIDE

Bismarck Trades and Labor Assembly Takes Action on Proposition

A resolution supporting the bond issue for a new west side school has been adopted by the Bismarck Trades and Labor Assembly, which also has gone on record as opposing house bill No. 163 which provides for abolition of many school holidays. The resolutions follow:

"Whereas there is an urgent need of a new school house on the west side of this city;

"For the reasons of the great distance the small children must go to the present schools and also for the reason of the crowded condition of all our present school buildings;

"And whereas the prices of labor and material are now at a lower level than there is any chance of them going to again for at least some time to come, therefore the tax payer will get his money's worth if a new school is built this year;

"And therefore be it resolved by the Bismarck Trades and Labor Assembly in regular meeting that we urge all Union Men and their friends to vote for the issuing of bonds for a new West Side School at the special election to be held February 20, 1923.

Unanimously adopted February 15, 1923.

THOMAS JENNINGS, Secretary.

Against H. B. 163

A resolution protesting against House Bill 163.

Whereas The Legislative assembly of the State of North Dakota has before it for passage a bill regulating school holidays known as House Bill 163 which makes Labor day a school day;

National holiday established by an act of congress, and is a holiday sacred to labor;

And whereas under House Bill 163 the city school term will have to be open on Labor Day the first Monday in September, and will thereby deprive the teachers from observing Labor Day and will keep children from taking part in Labor celebration, which they always take a prominent part in.

"And whereas house bill 163 provides that an hour of school shall be given over to exercises suitable to such holidays. But whereas school will be compelled to open on Labor Day no such exercises suitable to the spirit of Labor Day can be held, for there will be no time before hand to plan such exercises.

"And whereas said house bill does not respect the one International holiday the world has, which is Armistice Day.

Therefore be it resolved by the Bismarck Trades and Labor Assembly in regular meeting, that we protest against the passage and approval of House Bill 163.

Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the state senate.

Unanimously adopted February 15, 1923.

THOMAS JENNINGS, Secretary.

WAY CLEARED FOR REPEAL OF HOME BUILDERS

Senate Also Nears Final Vote on Mill and Elevator Manager Bill

BANK REPORT DIVIDED

Majority Report Favoring Bill to Repeal Guaranty Fund Act Accepted

The way was cleared in the North Dakota senate for final vote today on two of the most important measures urged by the state administrators.

These were Senate Bill 277, which provides for the liquidation of the North Dakota Home Building association under the direction of the state industrial commission, and S. B. 280, which removes the control of the state mill and elevator association from the industrial commission and places it in the hands of a non-political board of managers.

Both measures were reported in to the senate on divided reports by the state affairs committee, the Independent majority of the committee recommending the passage of the bills and the Nonpartisan minority their indefinite postponement.

In both cases the majority reports were accepted by the senate the vote being along party lines. There was practically no debate in either case.

Accept Bank Report.
In the same way the senate accepted the report of the majority members of the committee on banks and banking which recommended for passage Senate Bill 365, the bill introduced by Senator Walter Bond for the repeal of the state guaranty fund of bank deposits effective July 1, 1934. The vote on this measure was also along party lines. Its companion bill creating the office of supreme court commissioner, and giving that tribunal original jurisdiction for the liquidation of insolvent banks, was accepted for passage on a report of the same committee.

All of these measures will be on the calendar for third reading and final passage today.

Had the Ax Out.
At the same time the upper house of the legislature had its ax out during the yesterday afternoon session, and ruthlessly slaughtered a number of measures. One of these was Senate Bill 247, introduced by Senator Eastgate of Grand Forks, which would have repealed the present law requiring the union label to appear on state printing. The bill came in on divided report from the committee on public printing. Senator Whitson of Grand Forks called for a roll call vote and the bill was killed, 32 to 17.

A good grist of bills was passed in the course of the afternoon. To the surprise of many the Tofsrud bill, providing for a system of farm storage of grain, and the obtaining of loans thereon by warehouse receipts was passed by a vote of 30 to 17, without any particular fight on the bill being made by the league senators, who had formerly favored a bill along similar lines introduced by Senator Hamilton.

Have New Bills.
It was found necessary in the course of the afternoon to appoint a committee on delayed bills, as four senators asked for the suspension of the rules to permit them to introduce measures. This committee will examine the bills in question and will report to the senate on the advisability of permitting their introduction. A two-thirds vote of the senate will be necessary, however, to obtain permission for the introduction of any measure.

Senator Whitman of Grand Forks gave notice of his desire to introduce a bill for the repeal of the present state licensing department, or pool hall inspection law. His bill is very similar to that which was killed in the house, but is slightly amended so that it is likely to pass the house if it first gets by the senate successfully. This is one of the bills which will go before the committee on delayed bills.

Minor Gets Appropriation.
Consideration of S. B. 70, for an act creating a new state fair at Minot and a $25,000 annual appropriation thereon, was a hot argument over the values of fairs and the need of economy. Senator Lynch started the fireworks by suggesting that the proper course for the senate to follow would be to eliminate appropriations to all the state fairs, Grand Forks, Fargo and Mandan, not to endorse a new one. No party lines were drawn in the following debate, senators of either faction expressing themselves for or against the new fair appropriation. Ettestad, Hamilton, Benson, Patten, all leaguers, Bond and others spoke for a "fair deal" for the northwest corner of the state with Levang, Olson, Nathan, Ward, leaguers, and Page and Lynch, Independents, opposing a new appropriation. On the roll call the bill passed 33 to 14.

Senator Whitman's bill, originally drawn to define carnivals and regulate them, was passed as re-written. The measure now provides machinery by which officials or various communities are able to and are charged to enforce the law. It lays special stress on games of chance, lotteries and "all skin games" and provides a $50 to $500 penalty for operation of the same or for any persons participating in or responsible for any "for men only shows."

HOUSE VOTES TO PAY BILL OF AUDITORS

Bill Carrying Appropriation of $12,000 for Bishop, Brissman, Passes

KILL HAIL TAX CUT

Bill Would Have Reduced 3-Cent Flat Acreage Tax to One Cent an Acre

The house of representatives this afternoon voted to pay for the audit made by Bishop, Brissman and Company of the state industries which was the basis of the house investigation of 1921. The bill, appropriating $12,065.15, passed by a vote of 60 to 51.

Sharp debate between Independent and Nonpartisan league leaders preceded the vote, the debate being cut short when Rep. Twichell demanded the previous question and the Independents joined in the demand.

"This money is to pay for an audit conducted on a vote of the people, when they enacted an initiated law in 1921," Rep. Twichell said. "The Nonpartisans in control refused to provide the auditing board with the money to carry out this. A lot of people contributed money. I don't know who they are, and put it up as a guarantee with Bishop, Brissman and Co. that the bill would be paid. Bishop, Brissman and Company have never been paid and we propose to pay them now."

"And I think the audit was worth the money."

Rep. Maddock, Nonpartisan, asserted the whole proceeding was irregular. Rep. Patterson declared the audit company had been paid and Rep. Vogel declared that "Mr. Twichell got himself in a whole and wants us to pull him out."

Rep. Twichell retorted to the thrust by declaring he spent one hundred dollars of his own money going after the report during the 1921 session and he didn't ever expect to get it back, and didn't want it.

Clash on Hail Bill
In the second clash of the afternoon, the house killed the bill to reduce the flat acreage tax for the hail insurance department revolving fund from three cents an acre to one cent an acre. The "clinch" motion was applied, and two Independents joined the Nonpartisans to kill the bill.

Rep. Traynor, Ramsey county, pleading for the bill and declaring he was a farmer and always expected to be, said that the hail insurance fund already was large enough and that with "profit" made on delinquent losses promptly paid, the fund would be large enough.

The bill, he said, would save $540,000 a year, and the legislature ought to effect the economy.

Rep. Maddock, Mountrail, declared the farmers wanted a hail insurance fund big enough to take care of losses promptly, and that the opposition to the three-cent tax came from those who opposed hail insurance.

The vote to indefinitely postpone was 54 to 50. On accepting the report of the committee of the whole, the bill was amended and the final vote was 57 to kill the bill and 54 against it, with two absent.

To Reconsider Bill
A motion to reconsider and decline to concur in senate amendments to house bill No. 8, the act zoning and licensing the sale of liquor, was carried. The house had passed the bill applying to cities of 12,500 or over, the senate amended to include cities of 6,000 or over, and in this state the bill was indefinitely postponed yesterday.

There had not been much objection to the bill when it was introduced, and the final vote was 57 to kill the bill and 54 against it, with two absent.

SHIP BILL BEFORE SENATE; FIGHT RESUMED

British Debt Fund Bill Goes to Conference After Vote

Washington, Feb. 17.—The administration shipping bill again held the center of attention in the senate after the passage last night of the British debt funding bill which now goes to conference. The shipping measure was restored to its position as the unfinished business of the senate by motion of Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, who has in charge after a move for adjournment by Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas.

This move was not regarded as a test of strength on the bill since a number of senators on both sides were absent. Senator Robertson abandoned his fight against Jones' motion when it clattered assured him that he did not intend to proceed with his measure last night.

The shipping bill lost its status as the senate's unfinished business Monday after having held its place since Dec. 11, a parliamentary amendment giving the debt funding bill a clear way. The measure was accepted last night after 7 o'clock.

Little difficulty is expected in conference, the senate's action being regarded as bringing a government approval of the settlement of the $4,604,000 British debt which was not affected by the amendment adopted.

CLAIMS THAT BANQUET IS NOT INVOLVED

S. S. McDonald of the Workmen's Compensation Bureau has taken exception to a few statements in the Tribune Friday relative to his arrest for alleged violation of the eight hour law. He claims that he is not chairman of the compensation commission and also that he did not issue warrants for any violations of the eight hour law in connection with the Frazier banquet. His complaints, he said, covered prior infractions of the law.

State's Attorney Allen when interviewed said he did not recall just what alleged violations of the law applied to in the case of E. G. Frazier. He said, however, that McDonald had requested a large number of warrants involving Bismarck people and that he refused to issue only a small proportion of the ones asked. Whether the Frazier banquet was involved in any of these requests Mr. Allen could not say positively. He declared that he merely approved a few warrants prepared for him.

CHECK FIRE
THREATENING
MEAT PLANT

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 16.—Another change of wind from the south to a northerly direction this morning caused another flareup in the fire at Armour & Company plant, and at 3 o'clock this morning apprehension was felt that the flames might get beyond control.

An hour later when the additional fire apparatus was put into operation, the fire chief, Jerry Sullivan, said that he felt confident that he could confine the fire to the buildings still burning. The Associated Press correspondent who viewed the fire scene this morning at 3 o'clock said that it was an impressive spectacle. Of the nine story buildings, Nos. 17, 18 and 19, nothing remained except the dark framework walls from which hung long icicles.

As the movement of what had been the buildings flames still seethed, flashing the threat to spread to other parts of the plant beyond the fire wall protecting the neighboring refinery.

The shifting of the wind to the north caused the firemen to transfer protection to the Morris plant. It was feared that from several of the tottering walls which stand nearby the flames might get a foothold in the Morris building.

RADICALS' RECORD SHOWN DURING TRIAL

Chicago, Feb. 17.—Allen O. Meyer, chief of the radical bureau of the W. J. Burns' detective agency, here today prepared to answer charges made against him by Albert E. Balanow, alias Albert Balanow, confined in a deposition made for use in the trial of 22 alleged communists for activities at St. Joseph, Mo.

Balanow alleges that Meyer asked him to make a fictitious report on the radical movement in Chicago, and that he had acted as an agent for "Big Bill Haywood," I. W. W. leader, by transporting a trunk full of literature from Chicago to St. Joseph, Mo.

That the trunk full of literature was to be used as a "plant" on which to base Meyer's report.

Meyer was ordered to testify for the defense. He declined upon being questioned to reveal what kind of testimony he would give.

"I'll give all my testimony from a witness stand. Balanow produced citizenship papers which were read to the records. That move was significant. If any of the reports current here and in New York that denoted proceedings would be reported against the confessed paid informer.

30 HOURS, NEW YORK TO LONDON, BY 1926! PLAN FLIGHTS BY LAPS VIA SEA STATIONS

EDWARD R. ARMSTRONG (INSET) AND HIS "SEADROME" (ABOVE) WHICH HE PREDICTS WILL MAKE PASSENGER FLYING ACROSS THE ATLANTIC A REGULAR SERVICE BY 1926.

By NEA Service
Philadelphia, Feb. 17.—Regular daily flying passenger service back and forth across the Atlantic ocean will be an accomplished fact in 1926.

And the trip—each way—will be made in about 30 hours!

This is the belief of Edward R. Armstrong, a noted engineer, aviator and inventor of Philadelphia, who has just completed plans outlining in detail the establishment of this extraordinary service.

He proposes to construct eight gigantic stations which will be anchored at intervals of 400 miles across the Atlantic ocean. By methods which he has perfected it will be possible to anchor these stations in fixed places and stabilize them so that they will be free from the roll and pitch which even the most mammoth ocean liners are subjected to.

Each station or "seadrome" will be 1200 feet long, 400 feet wide, and have a platform of 11½ acres on which the seaplanes will alight. A crew of about 125 men will be stationed on each seadrome. There will be complete radio-telephone and wireless telegraph receiving and broadcasting stations, meteorological bureau, aeroplane repair shop and hotel accommodations for overnight guests.

Between stations huge buoys one every 50 miles—illuminated at night by acetylene gas, will mark the course of this new White Way.

Ten planes will leave the American terminal—say at Atlantic City—daily, and ten other planes will leave the English terminal—possibly at Plymouth—daily. Each plane will carry from 20 to 30 passengers, two crew and a mail. Meals will be served at each station. There will be additional space for carrying mail and express packages equivalent in weight to one-half the total passenger load.

At no time will a plane be more than one hour and a half away from a station. The stopovers at the stations will vary from 15 minutes to half an hour. Meals will be served at every station. The planes will travel at a speed ranging from 100 to 150 miles an hour and at times possibly up to 200 miles an hour, providing there is a favorable wind.

The proposed course across the Atlantic will be south of a line that divides the ocean into what might be called two "weather parts"; south of this line the ocean is free of 95 per cent of the hazards caused by fog, storms, and icebergs.

Armstrong says that so far as the flying phases of his plan are concerned there is not a detail that is not already an accomplished fact.

His two really new contributions are his methods of anchoring and stabilizing his mid-ocean stations.

S. B. 265—Clarifies the present law fixing the adjutant general's salary at $3,000 per year. Passed 44 to 1.

S. B. 321—Requires that employers give credit to employees on "length of service" for time spent in the army in recent war. 45 to 0.

S. B. 344—Permits counties to vote bonds for erection and maintenance of county hospitals. 45 to 0.

S. B. 81—$99,772 for maintenance of Ellendale normal. 46 to 0.

S. B. 83—$145,490 for Mayville Normal. 46 to 0.

S. B. 84—$30,400 for school for blind, Bathgate. 45 to 0.

S. B. 319—Requiring nomination petitions be filed 40 days instead of 30 days prior to election. Giving governor 25 days in which to make appointments after death causes vacancy. 45 to 2.

S. B. 317—Gives 20 days time prior to election for use of absent voters ballots. Raises time allowance from 10 days at present. Removing requirement that such ballots be on colored paper. Passed 44 to 0.

S. B. 318—Changing statutes relative to petitions on special elections be filed 20 days previously. 44 to 0.

S. B. 193—Tightening statutes relative to adoption of children. Requiring the parent of a child who gets good home, etc. One of Code commission bills. 45 to 1.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

DISTRACTING FORCES

Willow City, N. D., February 10, 1923.

Editor Tribune:

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." But let us get the rest of it. All play and no work makes Jack a miserable shirk.

Our schools today are too much given over to, and influenced by, holidays, special days, loosely or not at all observed, sport, for its own sake, social functions, the public school dance, cheap books, and utterly non-worthy movies. Playtime has been lengthened out of all proportion to work time, and more brief, too frequently, and the spirit of shrinking heightened. In view of the time devoted and the money spent the education of many a youth is fast becoming a liability.

We do not believe that all the schools are doing poor work or that indifference is everywhere a grave fault but we do claim that the Nation on the whole has been looking down and not up educationally, and that for the most part she does not know it. It may be said that the youth of the land is not getting fifty per cent of the benefit it might get were school placed first. Dispite the distracting influences set forth above, together with others that might be mentioned, pupils are promoted year after year improperly prepared for the next grade. They necessarily have less vital interest in study, have dimmer ideals of culture, and false notions of work both in school and out. They get the idea of "shirk," not work. The schools with our present standards are turning out finished products, many of whom, with their false ideas of service and of rewards, will make social problems more rather than less serious, and the Republic's future more rather than less uncertain.

Then we must not overlook the poorly trained and illiterate, swayed under necessity, hither and yonder through the influence of unprincipled leaders.

But we do not believe as some do that this generation in itself is lost and that we are lost, but we believe with many others, that we are moving in the wrong direction and recklessly, also that wrong ideas are implanted. Ideas make ideals, and ideals make life. As to the time devoted to books, if the necessary examination days, and the unnecessary sport days, and the special days, are cut out and the learner gets only eight months of school training. This is bad but it is not the worst! To this loss of time and the consequent added progress, in books must be added the distracting influences of high school sports, special days, and society events, planned, maneuvered and supported wholly by students, conditions that will seriously affect the educational morale of any school. Common sense makes this plain.

Far be it from the writer to wish to deny to boys and girls any needed recreation in the form of athletics, social diversions or vacations. His desire is to center the mind of the public upon the fact, apparent enough to the observant person, that we are losing eight of work—real work—and banking too much upon a good time; making the field of education a flowery bed of intellectual ease, stirred by the redolent breezes of vacuous movies and delectable story books. Too many are looking upon education, not as a business, but as a pastime. Something cannot be had over books without effort, any more than in the world of trade. When other matters such as those mentioned above rather than lessons fill the mind, lessons will not be learned. In regard to a distracting force of a particularly pernicious nature the elaborate school dance should be especially noted. Everything considered no agreement need be made on this point. By the school dance we mean the elaborately staged affair pulled off in "social state"—the thought absorber, the time killer, the caste maker, wherever it may occur. This "school" function is a class by itself. We do not have in mind the "how" usually held at the close of a literary program and games and attended by all pupils. This does not distract and is democratic. Let us say furthermore that we are not opposed to the dance in its regular and allotted avenues.

No thoughtful person will say that our public system of education is a failure. The system is not at fault but its administration, or in other words the way we use our opportunities is at fault. There are breakers ahead, if we do not set for ourselves higher standards. The fact that twenty-five per cent of the men in the army drafts were unable to read ordinary army orders aught, that the educational level taking the country as a whole, is no higher than the seventh grade, and that we hold the ninth place among nations answers the question of our status as regards school training.

Let it be observed that believing a thing does not make it so, though it satisfies the believer; we have deluded ourselves into believing it will work no longer. Let us begin, therefore, to do better work, also more work, not play work, with goody-goody time, half time attendance, picture book interest and vacations. To this end we must eliminate the things that stand in the way, some of which were mentioned above. Need they be mentioned again?

As to the cause of the poor preparation of so many pupils and students, which no one will deny, let the blame not be laid at the feet of youth, as a class. Youth is not supposed to lead, but to be led. Boys and girls are not supposed to do the planning as to the method in education, or to determine the subject matter, or to narrow the meets and bounds in the soul the ideals of life. It is quite evident that a large part, and a very large part, we must admit, of the American people need to realize that proficiency in books is more than fine schoolhouses, top-heavy courses of study and high taxes. That it is more than sweet girl graduates parading the land with daintily tied diplomas and of young men who when winning them, their diplomas mean, were more interested in sport, cheap books and movies than in their studies. Let it be understood that the young women are as much attracted by outside forces as the young men.

The fundamental facts that should be impressed upon the minds of students are that preparation for life depends upon honest efforts constantly put forth; that there must be a saying, "good-bye" to an easy time. To the degree that the public learns this will the boys and girls be more sober minded about school and school activities, more ready to bring, and deeper thinking. The father's high unendurable burden of school taxes may not then have become appreciably less heavy, but the son's tax burden of regret will have become quite negligible. School life will stand for more than false glory and superficial thinking. Thought is the soul of life. There is too little thinking in education today.

Look at this picture! More than half of the public taxes spent for public education; six per cent of our native born population illiterate; an average training equal only to that of a seventh grade pupil, an eighty per cent attendance upon school; one-half of the school enrollment making a promotion grade of eighty per cent or less; many graduates unprepared to do higher scholastic work; one-fourth of those in the army drafts unable to interpret an ordinary military order understandingly! And, look at this picture also! The public school dance; the commercialized, unnatural movie, a mental and moral disintegrating force; late hours; manufactured excuses for non-attendance; draw the rest of the picture yourself.

Look ahead! Have we a vision? The vision of America, a generation, a hundred years hence, and beyond, with American ideals based on sound education, not for a class, a sect, or an interest, but for all; not scrambled patched up, mostly and halt, an excuse, a pretense? Yes, an education in which thought shall be the soul of school life; an education that shall include a culture of life's nobler side, making the withering pleasure an aversion and a loathing. As we look forward let us also look inward.

fort and a cheap preparation, too often a glamour of pretense, cease to satisfy and become a reproach. In the reaching of this ideal, teachers are not excused. They must be leaders thereunto in thought and through personal influence. Only teachers with ideals that satisfy, that is with a longing for something nobler and truer can create such ideals in the heart of young people. Nevertheless, the greatest factor is the home—the fathers and mothers—yes, and the taxpayers and citizens in general. In solemn hush let it be said that those who create the spirit of an age should not condemn that age.

This age as no other demands preparation—a ready knowledge and power to think clearly, a love of books and an appreciation of the things that abide. These things are not brought about in a day by superficial teaching or by the pursuit of the follies of life. Let us eliminate public school dances, "commercialized" movie, cheap books, cut the holidays, put special days to their intended use and to book tasks and do away with

Friends, we are not willing, let us say again, to lay the faults so apparent in the wake of the school, to youth as a class. This generation is all right in itself, insofar as it is following evil lines, or loose lines, failing thereby to prepare for tomorrow it is doing so because the road has been opened to it, or because the bars have been laid down to block it will. We must, in order to get a hundred per cent return on the time and money spent, get a different educational view point. The people must act together. Only by so doing will a ramshackle ef-

NO NEWS OF BRITISH SHIP IS AVAILABLE

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 17.—While there was news of three vessels that met disaster in the Pacific ocean west of Washington and south of Vancouver Island, custom observers waited for word of the steamship Prince, no news of the Prince having been received since the faint message sent, her wireless failing before she could give her position. Steamer Mika was burned at the water's edge after she had lost her rudder at Umatilla reef and was a drifting hulk of Cape Flattery while her crew are coming to Seattle.

The steamer Hantita which went on the rocks near Carmah lights on the west coast of Vancouver Island was believed to be still afloat although it was expected to be a total loss. Her crew with a few tents camped on the shore in that vicinity. The motor ship Coolcha with two of her officers aboard was clinging to the rocks at Alberts head, near Victoria, her owners hoping she might be gotten off the rocks or at least her engines saved. The Custom Prince, British passenger and freight liner with captain and crew of 42 was subject to many contradictory rumors.

A report that she had been found and the crew saved was based upon hearsay.

NONPARTISAN IDEALS TOLD IN ADDRESS

Senator Gross of Grant County Discussed Them Before Convention

Speaking, he said, as a "layman from the farm," Senator O. C. Gross of Grant county, talked up on "Nonpartisan Ideals" before the Nonpartisan women's auxiliary convention here. Senator Gross said: "Nonpartisans are idealists and for me to speak to you of idealists is like carrying coals to New Castle. I wish to be considered as speaking from the viewpoint of a layman from the farm. The people of the United States have permitted their share in the government to be largely taken away from them by business interests. We desire to take back again our proportionate share of that government. In this we are actuated by the ideal of the founders of this Republic which is a 'truly representative government.' A comparatively new people, this country has been able to levy a very heavy tribute upon the many. Farmers and producing laborers are not receiving their full share for the products of their labor. We are banded together in an effort to correct this injustice and our ideal is the eternal ideal of justice to all."

"Our industrial program is merely an immediate objective and is local in character. Our ideals unite us with the progressives of the entire country and also with many in the opposing party who, like us, believe in a 'truly representative government' and in the establishment of justice throughout the world."

Subject to Influences
"Man is subject to three great influences; hereditary, the influence of the past; environment, the influence of the present; and the lure of the ideal, the influence from the future. In this latter field, man stretches out his hand toward the infinite and is lifted up and strengthened."

"I once stood on the deck of the Great Lakes steamship 'Northland' as it was steaming up the rapids in the St. Mary's river. The river was about seventeen feet deep and the steamer drew about seventeen feet of water. The current was very swift and strong and we proceeded very slowly. We came to a stop. The steamer was aground with the engine still running. The whistle blew and from somewhere up the river came a little tug which was attached to our bow. Our propeller stopped and the little tug began to pull and we began to move slowly up the river. I did not understand and went to a ship's officer and asked, 'How is it that our own powerful engines could not push us and that little tug can pull us up the river?' He said, 'You see when our propellers were running they were lowering the water around us and we were ground. When the tug began to pull her propeller was piling up the water around us and we were afloat.'"

"The Nonpartisan League loaded with the industrial program is in the position of that ship in St. Mary's river, and it is attached to ideals which are abundantly able to take it up the river. 'There needs to be a definite relation between the ideals of a progressive party and the ideals of the individual members of that party. The ideals of the party should be in advance of the ideals of the party. We cannot advance toward democracy by autocratic methods. If we would lift anything from the mire we ourselves must stand on firmer ground. A stern wheeler cannot make the rapids.'"

What Are Ideals
"What then are the ideals which are required of the soldiers in the army of human progress? The earth is a testing laboratory. In every deal between men we are brought face to face with a decision between justice and injustice, between protection and oppression, between right and wrong. If we stand the preliminary tests we will finally be taken up into a high mountain by the power of the Great Prince who will bid for our allegiance by the offer of material reward. If we refuse to bow down to him our eyes will be opened and we will see standing near another Prince who offers no inducement but who holds up the banner of service, and the soldiers of any true reform movement will one by one separate themselves from their fellows and move over beside that silent Prince and there swear their allegiance, and the soldiers of the two Princes will contend for mastery upon the mountain top."

WAY CLEARED FOR REPEAL OF HOME BUILDERS

The measure passed 45 to 2, Martin of Morton opposing. Lt. Gov. Frank Hyland during the course of the afternoon announced his belief that there "will be no trouble completing the work on all senate bills by Monday and I hope by Saturday. There are introduced in the senate a total of 387 bills," he said. "Of these there are but 44 senate bills not yet acted upon by the committee. The house has 312 bills of which 95 have been indefinitely postponed." S. B. 229, Etestad (N), which would cut down the number of publications of delinquent tax lists from three to one brought Senator Poyhar to his feet with a motion to indefinitely postpone the bill. "There seems to be a disposition on the part of this legislature to take a whack at the newspapers. No one I know of ever saw a country printer who was overburdened with cash, and the rates have already been slashed. I demand a roll-call so we can find out how many friends the newspapers have."

"The Masquerader" led us to expect great things of Guy Bates Post as a screen star. The realization of this expectation has come in "Omar the Tentmaker," which shows at the Eltinge theater, Monday and Tuesday. Here are some of the artistic settings it contains:

A rose garden, with fountains splashing in the silvery moonlight—a poetic youth and a beautiful maid! The streets of golden Naishapur, bustling with pilgrims, natives, vendors of everything imaginable, caravans of camels, bands of Bedouins on Arabian steeds—and beggars! A tavern, with bibulous youths roistering in the immemorial manner! The mystic Temple of Zoroaster, its altar looming up in the semi-darkness of the interior, its minarets where the muezzins chant their call to prayer! The gardens of the Governor, with slaves who carry out his slightest wish, for his wish is law! The dungeon cells—"the home of ten thousand shadows"—in which the doomed await their execution, or the

NONPARTISAN IDEALS TOLD IN ADDRESS

Senator Gross of Grant County Discussed Them Before Convention

Speaking, he said, as a "layman from the farm," Senator O. C. Gross of Grant county, talked upon "Nonpartisan Ideals" before the Nonpartisan women's auxiliary convention here. Senator Gross said:

"Nonpartisans are idealists and for me to speak to you of idealists is like carrying coals to New Castle. I wish to be considered as speaking from the viewpoint of a layman from the farm."

"The people of the United States have permitted their share in the government to be largely taken away from them by business interests. We desire to take back again our proportionate share in that government. In this we are actuated by the ideal of the founders of this Republic which is a 'truly representative government.'"

"A comparatively few people in this country have been able to levy a very heavy tribute upon the many. Farmers and producing laborers are not receiving their fair share for the products of their labor. We are banded together in an effort to correct this injustice and our ideal is 'the eternal ideal of justice to all.'"

"Our industrial program is merely an immediate objective and is local in character. Our ideals unite us with the progressives of the entire country and also with many in the opposing party who, like us, believe in a 'truly representative government' and in 'the establishment of justice throughout the world.'"

Subject to Influences
"Man is subject to three great influences; heredity, the influence of the past; environment, the influence of the present; and the lure of the ideal, the influence from the future. In this latter, man stretches out his hand toward the infinite and is lifted up and strengthened."

"I once stood on the deck of the Great Lakes steamship 'Northland' as it was steaming up the rapids in the St. Mary's river. The river was about seventeen feet deep and the steamer drew about seventeen feet of water. The current was very swift and strong and we proceeded very slowly. We came to a stop. The steamer was aground with the engine still running. The whistle blew and from somewhere up the river came a little tug which was attached to our bow. Our propeller stopped and the little tug began to pull and we began to move slowly up the river. I did not understand and went to a ship's officer and asked: 'How is it that our own powerful engines could not push us and that little tug can pull us up the river?' He said, 'You see when our propellers were running they were lowering the water around us and we were ground. "The Nonpartisan League leaded with the industrial program is in the position of that ship in St. Mary's river, and it is attached to ideals which are abundantly able to take it up the river."

"There needs to be a definite relation between the ideals of a progressive party and the ideals of the individual members of that party. If we would lift anything from the mire we ourselves must stand on firmer ground. A stern wheeler cannot make the rapids."

AT THE MOVIES
THE ELTINGE.
"The Masquerader" led us to expect great things of Guy Bates Post as a screen star. The realization of this expectation has come in "Omar the Tentmaker," which shows at the Eltinge theater, Monday and Tuesday. Here are some of the artistic settings it contains:
A rose garden, with fountains splashing in the silvery moonlight—a poetic youth and a beautiful maid! The streets of golden Naishapur, bustling with pilgrims, natives, vendors of everything imaginable, caravans of camels, bands of Bedouins on Arabian steeds—and beggars! A tavern, with bibulous youths roiling in the immemorial manner! The mystic Temple of Zoroaster, its altar looming up in the semi-darkness of the interior, its minarets where the muezzins chant their call to prayer! The gardens of the Governor, with slaves who carry out his slightest wish, for his wish is law! The dungeon cells—"the home of ten thousand shadows"—in which the doomed await their execution, or the far greater dread of torture! The potter's shop, emblematic of the seat of the Maker of Man, and the clay on the wheel as the clay in his hands! The halls of the mighty Shah of Shahs, whose wealth can buy for his leering senility even the fairest flower of all Persia! The study of the philosopher-poet, Omar, the Tentmaker, son of an artisan father, whose manifold talents compose the eternally beloved quatrain and invent a practicable scientific calendar—a room where scrolls of verse mingle with astronomical instruments!

Chicago, Feb. 17.—Allen O. Meyer, chief of the radical bureau of the V. J. Burns detective agency, today prepared to answer charges made against him by Albert E. H. Balaban, a Chicagoan, who in a deposition made for use in the trial of 22 alleged communists for activities at St. Joseph's, Ill.

Balaban alleges that Meyer asked him to make a fictitious report that would show he had acted as an agent for "Big Bill Haywood," I. W. W. leader, by transporting a trunk full of literature from Chicago to Baltimore.

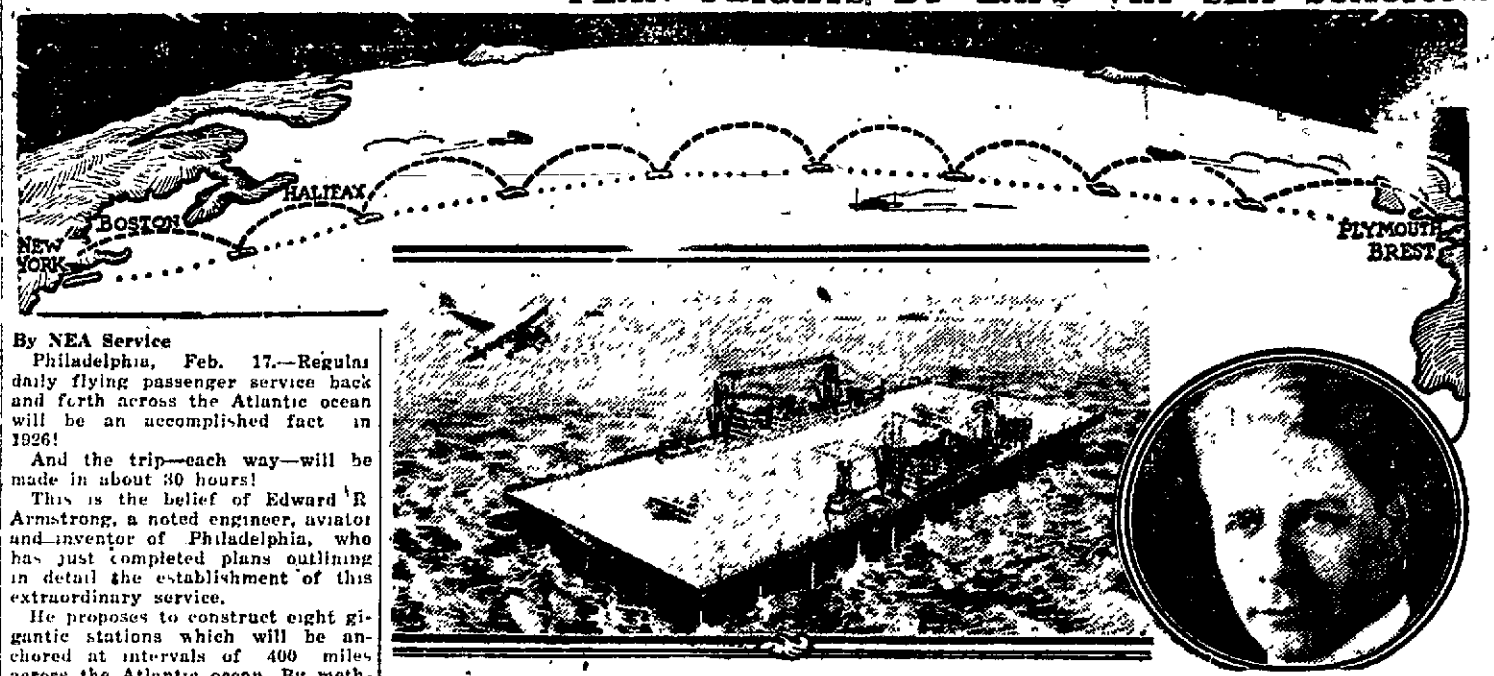

Meyer was ordered to testify for the defense. He declined upon being questioned to reveal what kind of "sympathy" he would give.

"I'll give all my testimony from the witness stand," Balaban produced a number of papers which were read into the record. That move was significant in view of the reports current here and in New York that deportation proceedings would be requested against the confessed paid informer.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

DISTRACTING FORCES
Willow City, N. D., February 10, 1923.

Editor Tribune:

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." But let us get the rest of it. All play and no work makes Jack a miserable shirk.

Our schools today are too much given over to, and influenced by, holidays, special days, loosely or not at all observed, sport for its own sake, social functions, the public school dance, cheap books, and utterly non-worthy movies. Playtime has been lengthened out of all proportion to work time, and the work itself made lighter and more brief, too frequently, and the spirit of shrinking heightened. In view of the time devoted and the money spent the education of many a youth is fast becoming a liability.

We do not believe that all the schools are doing poor work or that indifference is everywhere a grave fault—but we do claim that the Nation on the whole has been looking down and not up educationally, and that for the most part she does not know it. It may be safely stated that the youth of the land is not getting fifty per cent of the benefit it might get were the time devoted and the distracting influences set forth above, together with others that might be mentioned, pupils are promoted year after year improperly prepared scholastically and undeveloped mentally. They do not get an adequate amount of drill in the practical application of what they learned. As a result the schools are turning out graduates with a low grade of scholarship. They necessarily have less vital interest in study, have flimsy ideals of culture, and false notions of work both in school and out. They get the idea of "shirk," not work. The schools with our present standards are turning out finished products, many of whom, with their false ideas of service and of rewards, will make social problems more serious than less serious, and the Republic's future more rather than less uncertain. Then we must not overlook the non-finished product, the poorly trained and the illiterate, swayed under necessity, hither and yonder through the influence of unprincipled leaders.

But we do not believe as some do that this generation in itself is bad or that we are lost, but we believe with many others, that we are moving in the wrong direction and recklessly, also that wrong ideas are being inculcated. Ideas make ideals, and ideals make life.

As to the time devoted to books, if the necessary examination days, the unnecessary sport days, and the special days, are counted out the learner gets only eight months of school training. This is bad but it is not the worst! To this loss of time and the consequent added progress in books must be added the distracting influences of high tension interest in sport for the sake of sport, special days, and society events, planned, maneuvered and supported wholly by students, conditions that will seriously affect the educational morale of any school. Common sense makes this plain.

Far be it from the writer to wish to deny to boys and girls any recreation in the form of athletics, dramatics or violations. His desire is to center the mind of the public upon the fact, apparent enough to the observant person, that we are losing sight of work—real work—and banking too much upon a good time; making the field of education a flowery bed of intellectual ease, stirred by the redolent breezes of vacuous movies and delectable story books. Too many are looking upon education, not as a business, but as a pastime. Something cannot be had over books without effort, any school dance should be especially noted. Everything considered argument need be made on this point. By the school dance we mean the elaborately staged affair pulled off in "social state"—the thought absorber, the time killer, the pastime wherever it may occur. This "school" function is in a class by itself. We do not have in mind the "hoon" usually held at the close of a literary program and games and attended by all pupils. This does not distract and is democratic. Let us say furthermore that we are not opposed to the dance in its regular and allotted avenues.

No thoughtful person will say that our public system of education is a failure. The system is not at fault but its administration, or in other words the way we use our opportunities is at fault. There are breakers ahead, if we do not set for ourselves higher standards. The fact that twenty-five per cent of the men in the army are illiterate is a sad and ordinary army order, right, that the educational level taking the country as a whole, is no higher than the seventh grade, and that we hold the ninth place among nations answers the question of our status as regards school training. It is observed that believing a thing does not make it so, though it satisfies the believer; we have deluded ourselves into believing but it will work no longer. Let us begin, therefore, to do better work, also more work, not play work with goodly booty, but half time attendance, picture-book-interest and vacations. To this end we must eliminate the things that stand in the way, some of which were mentioned above. Need they be mentioned again?

As to the cause of the poor preparation of so many pupils and students, who no one will deny, let the blame not be laid at the feet of youth, as a class. Youth is not supposed to lead, but to be led. Boys and girls are not supposed to do the planning and the method in education, or to determine the subject matter, or to narrow the meets and bounds in mental and social activities in one direction and to enlarge them in another. It is not theirs to carve in the soul the ideals of life. It is quite evident that a large part, and a very large part, we must admit, of the American people need to realize that proficiency in books is more than fine schoolhouses, top-heavy courses of study and high taxes. That it is more than sweet girl graduates parading the land with daintily tied diplomas and of young men who when winning them, their diplomas we mean, were more interested in sport, cheap books and movies than in their studies. Let it be understood that the young women are as much attracted by outside forces as the young men.

The fundamental facts that should be impressed upon the minds of students are that preparation for life depends upon honest efforts constantly put forth; that there must be saying "good bye" to an easy time. To the degree that the public learns this will the boys and girls be more sober minded about school and school activities, more sedate living, and deeper thinking. The father's well-meaning but burdensome burden of school taxes may not then have become appreciably less heavy, but the son's tax burden of regret will have become quite negligible. School life will stand for more than false glory and superficial thinking. Thought is the soul of life. There is too little thinking in education today.

Friends, we are not willing, let us say again, to lay the faults so apparent in the wake of the school, to youth as a class. This generation is all right in itself. Insofar as it is following evil lines, or loose lines, failing thereby to prepare for tomorrow it is doing so because the road has been opened to it, or because the bars have been laid down, to room at will. We must, in order to get a hundred per cent return on the time and money spent, get a different educational view point. The people must act together. Only by so doing will a ramshackle of-sport for the sake of sport. Let us teach that there is no excellence without great labor, that only excellence pays, that the getting of wisdom is a business and that the schoolroom is a place of business. All believe in education; none should make a pretense of it!

Another phase! In preparing boys and girls for tomorrow's duties let us not lose sight of their development along higher materialistic lines. Without losing sight of how best to raise hogs for the largest profits, how best to till the soil, how best to build bridges and skyscrapers, how to cast up accounts the quickest, and how to secure the largest possible balance of international trade we must give adequate attention to that side of life which cannot be taken apart by the scalpel or affected by drugs; which cannot be weighed on the scales of commerce or bartered for gold; which cannot be reduced to a formula or fathomed by the intellect—the soul. A business course of study with the humanities left out is not education. We may as well expect moral, aside from religious training, to develop the spiritual nature.

Look at this picture! More than half of the public taxes spent for public education; six per cent of our native born population illiterate; an average training equal only to that of a seventh grade pupil, an eighty per cent attendance upon school; one-half of the school enrollment making a promotion grade of eighty per cent or less; many graduates unprepared to do higher scholastic work; one-fourth of those in the army drafts unable to interpret an ordinary military order understandingly! And, look at this picture also! The public school dance, the commercialized, unnatural movie, the mental and moral disintegrating force; late hours; manufactured excuses for non-attendance;—draw the rest of the picture yourself.

Look ahead! Have we a vision? The vision of America—a general, a hundred years hence, and beyond, with American ideals based on sound education, not for a class, a sect, or an interest, but for all; not scrambled patched up, mostly and halt, an excuse, a pretense? Yes, an education in which thought shall be the soul of school life; an education that shall include a culture of life; a nobler side, making the withering pleasures an aversion and a loathing. As we look forward let us also look inward.

Children are not supposed to lead but to be led.

Let us get a different view point. JOHN MEISSNER, Principal High School, Willow City, North Dakota.

NO NEWS OF BRITISH SHIP IS AVAILABLE

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 17.—While there was news of three vessels that met disaster in the Pacific ocean west of Washington and south of Vancouver Island, custom observers waited for word of the steamship Prince, no news of the Prince having been received since the faint message sent, her wireless failing before she could give her position.

Steamer Mika was burned at the water's edge after she had lost her rudder at Umatilla reef and was a drifting hulk of Cape Flattery while her crew are coming to Seattle.

The steamer Hantah which went on the rocks near Carmah lights on the west coast of Vancouver Island was believed to be still afloat although it was expected to be a total loss. Her crew with a few tents camped on the shore in that vicinity.

The motor ship Coolah with two of her officers aboard was clinging to the rocks at Alberca head, near Victoria, her owners hoping she might be gotten off the rocks or at least her engines saved. The Custom Prince, British passenger and freight liner with captain and crew of 42 was subject to many contradictory rumors.

A report that she had been found and the crew saved was based upon hearsay.

ATTENDS D. B. C. ON BANKER'S ADVICE

"What school shall I attend?" asked Harold Kinney of his banker. "Dakota Business College, Fargo, N. D.," was the reply. He did so, and now has a fine position with the 1st Nat'l Bank of Wilton.

Here's why bankers recommend "Dakota"—why nearly 700 banks employ D. B. C. graduates: Better teachers; banking and merchandising actually practiced, as well as studied from text-books; graduates more progressive—226 have become bank officers. "Follow the Successfull" Spring term begins March 5th. W. F. L. Watkins, Pres., 806 Front St., Fargo, N. D.

Items That Help Us Grasp Size of British Debt

Great Britain and the United States have agreed upon a way to settle their financial differences. The settlement of "this momentous question," says the British Chancellor, "is a necessary prelude to settlement of European questions." "Here," says President Harding, "is the first clearing of the war-clouded skies in a debt-burdened world. It is a recommitment of the English-speaking world to the validity of contract; it is, in effect, a plight against war and war expenditures." Read THE LITERARY DIGEST this week, and you will get an accurate idea of just what the British Debt settlement means and the full flood of public opinion upon it. Other striking articles are:

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER

(Established 1873)

AN EXPENSIVE DAY!

If the house of representatives is to duplicate its session of yesterday the "economy session" will be pretty expensive for the taxpayers.

For the house of a certainty cost the taxpayers more than $1,000,000 in the next two years in its action on one bill and if its action on another bill is confirmed it will cost the taxpayers at least $500,000, and probably much more.

The house favored H. B. 233, which would abolish the highway commission and decline federal road aid, by large enough vote to pass the measure. The economy cry prompted many to vote for the bill. And what will be the result?

There is about $1,000,000 of road work under contract on the federal aid plan. The work must be done or the state's faith with contractors broken and exhaustive litigation entailed. Of this $1,000,000 the federal government would pay $500,000. The house declined federal aid. The taxpayers must dig up the $500,000 the state would get from the federal government.

Of the $500,000 obtained from the federal government the taxpayers of the state pay in federal taxes not more than $15,000. The bulk of it is from the older and more wealthy states of the east.

It was pleaded for a cessation of road work for two years. But did the house actually provide for such cessation? It did not. It has not even suggested a bill to limit the road expenditures of counties and townships, where the bulk of the money has been spent under the federal aid plan. The result, if anything, will be to increase county and township road building, and without the aid of money from the federal government. The highway commission must continue while existing contracts are unfinished, so there can be little saving there.

The house in another action killed H. B. 33, which would reduce the 3 cent flat acreage hail insurance tax to 1 cent. This would have effected a saving of $540,000 a year, the house was told, or more than a million in the next two years.

There might be good objection to the bill in normal times. But this legislature is an "economy session." The hail insurance fund created by the 3-cent tax is a surplus; to enable the department to pay warrants in cash. The department already has a large surplus; a 1-cent an acre tax would increase it rapidly. The 3-cent tax amounts to about 20 per cent of the entire state tax levy.

Yet with hail warrants being sold almost at par under the agreement made by the Industrial Commission and the Commissioner of Insurance, only about $1,000,000 out of the total outstanding of $2,600,000 have been sold by the farmers. Either they have disposed of them through other means or they prefer to wait until they are payable and collect the interest.

Under this circumstance it would seem that no injury could have been done the hail insurance department by passage of this bill. The taxpayers would have been saved more than $1,000,000 in two years.

One day's work in the lower house thus costs the taxpayers $1,500,000. An expensive day!

EFFECTIVE SERVICE

Dispatches received in Bismarck state that the warning sent them by the weather bureau saved from destruction thousands of dollars worth of livestock which farmers were enabled to get to cover.

Because of the tricks which the unruly elements play at times on the scientific forecasts of the weather bureau, too often the value of the service is not realized. If hundreds of head of livestock were saved from destruction during the storm the local weather bureau has justified the expense of its maintenance for many a day. And in addition it is probable that thousands of dollars were saved shippers by receiving notice not to send out perishable goods to be lost in blocked railroad trains.

The weather service of the government, expending over the entire United States and Canada, is a remarkable achievement in scientific organization, and the result of the warning given in anticipation of this week's storm shows that its benefits are not confined to warning people of the danger of running into a shower on a picnic party.

WIDOWS

The census shows America has over three and a half million widows. You'd have lost money if you had been betting on the total without knowing it.

How many of those widows and their children were left amply provided for when the man of the house passed on?

Most husbands and fathers do a fairly good job, at providing for their families, on this side of the grave. Few of them carry enough insurance, probably because death seems far off until a few hours or days before the last heart-beat.

MISTAKEN

Our so-called flappers (a word now almost obsolete) are the product of the dry climate of America. So claims Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson, English writer and actress, arrived in New York on a lecture tour. She thinks our dry, stimulating climate keeps us keyed up too highly.

Didn't we have the same sort of climate when grandma was a quiet and demure young lady? However, Mrs. Forbes-Robertson's idea will be gladly accepted by many, especially the ones who are always seeking an alibi outside themselves.

DINOSAUR

The skull of a dinosaur, giant beast said to have lived five million years ago, is dug up by scientists of American Museum of Natural History.

Some of these prehistoric monsters were as large as a small bungalow. They become extinct by wandering into swamps from which they could not extricate themselves. Aesop could have written a good fable about this, applying it to human careers. The moral would be: Watch your step, every minute.

NO PEACE IN IRELAND.

The responsibility for the continuance of civil war in Ireland is once more clearly fixed. The peace proposal of Richard Mulcahy, the minister of defense, who has offered amnesty to all rebels who on February 18 have surrendered their arms, has been rejected by the chief of the republican forces. The last elections proved conclusively that Ireland wants peace and that she is content with peace on the terms of the Free state treaty. Unfortunately, wanting peace and getting it are two different matters so long as there exists a band of determined and desperate men to break it. We wish profoundly that we could sympathize with these rebels, for then we might at least feel that Ireland is not suffering in vain, but we do not see that there is a great enough difference in the degree of liberty offered Irishmen in the Free State and that which they would enjoy in the Republic to justify the continued shedding of blood and destruction of property.

The Free State pacification of Ireland is far from complete. A policy of reprisal has succeeded in forcing abandonment of nearly all the killing, but no way has yet been found to protect property against the guerrilla bands which terrorize towns and countryside alike with the torch. This is by no means to say that no progress has been made, for there have been many important defections from the irregular forces. Liam Deasy, de Valera's chief deputy, now a prisoner under death sentence, has himself appealed to the republicans to lay down their arms, and indeed was the one through whom Mulcahy's peace proposal was conveyed to the chief of the republican forces. The Freeman's Journal also reports that 600 prisoners at Limerick have asked for an "opportunity to press on their leaders the futility of a war of extermination."

But complete peace does not appear to be the happy lot of Ireland just yet. The real tragedy does not lie so much in the civil war itself but in its futility. That the Republic is most unlikely, but in the event they do, behind the Free State is the whole power of the British Empire. The issue is immediate peace and liberty within the Empire, or as the Republicans themselves have put it "a war of extermination."

A PREHISTORIC CLOAK

A cloak of woolen cloth, believed to be 3,000 years old, has been found in a peat bog in Sweden. The slightly acid water of the peat formation acted as a preservative. This is the oldest complete garment ever found in Europe, though the British museum has several bits of cloth that are considered still older. But 3,000 years is a fairly respectable age. When that cloth was woven, Homer's father of grandfathers was a boy, playing in the streets of some Greek town. The Israelitish monarchy was not yet thought of. Saul, its first king, probably was not yet born. Egypt, rich but defenseless, was verging to decay; but the founding of Rome lay farther in the future than the landing of the Pilgrims now lies in the past. Through most of Europe, bronze, rather than iron, was the chosen metal.

Yet even in this misty distant time the northern barbarians either wove woolen cloaks for themselves or carried on trade enough to buy them from more advanced peoples. A good many of the arts of civilization date farther back than our grandfathers dreamed, and were more widely diffused. — Chicago Journal.

The Forgiveness of Sins

Son, thy sins are forgiven. — Mark 2:5.

Read Mark 2:1-12.

"But to the mind of Jesus no loss which may come to the body compares with the loss which comes to the soul by breaking the law of God."

MEDITATION: Jesus never speculated about the philosophy of sin. He regarded it as the most terrible thing in the world, for sin separates a soul from God.

HYMN:

Jesus, lover of my soul, let me to thy bosom fly,
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high;
Hide me, O my Saviour hide, till the storm of life is past;
Safe into the haven guide, O receive my soul at last.

PRAYER: Lord, our God, the help of those that flee unto thee, cleanse us from our sins and from every thought displeasing to thy goodness, that with a pure heart and a clear soul, we may venture, confidently and fearlessly, to pray unto thee. Amen.

BUSINESS BEFORE PLEASURE

"I must go on. I gave my promise."

She nodded.

"It means Tollifer now. The descent is more dangerous."

Suddenly the storm lifted for a moment. Far below, miles in reality, straight jets of steam rose high above black, curling smoke, faintly, faintly, whistles sounded. The snowplows!

He gripped her arms with the sight of it, nor did she resist. Thrilled, enthralled, they watched it; the whirling smoke, the shooting steam, the white spray which indicated the grinding, churning progress of the plows, propelled by the heavy engines behind. From the swollen lips of Houston:

"They've started the fight! I'm going to work with them."

"But—"

He knew what she meant and shook his head.

"No—she does not need me. My presence would mean nothing to her. I can't tell you why. My place—"

For an instant Medaine Robinette looked at him with frankly questioning eyes, eyes which told that a question was arising as to his guilt in at least one of the things which circumstances had arrayed against him. But suddenly she was speaking, as though to divert her thoughts.

"We'll have about three hours. It's our chance. We'd better cut this cord the one in the lead may fall and pull the other one over. We'd better make haste."

Houston stepped before her. A moment later they were edging their way down the declivity of what once had been a railroad track.

Black dots they became—dots which appeared in the afternoon to the laboring crews of the snowplows. They were edging their way forward, then stopping, pulling about beetling precipices, plunging themselves out of the heavier drifts, where drops of 10 and even 20 feet had thrown them. Once, at the edge of an overhanging ledge, he scrambled furiously, failed and fell—so down in a drift far below, to crawl painfully back to the waiting dot above. Hours! The dots grew larger. Once they came, stumbling, reeling. The woman wavered and fell; he caught her. Then double-weighted, a pack on his back, a form in his arms, he came on, his blood-red eyes searching almost sightlessly the faces of the waiting, stolid, grease-smudged men, their thick voice drooping over bloody lips:

"Somebody take her—get her into the bunk cars. She's given out. I'm—I'm all right. Take care of her. I've got to go on—to Tollifer!"

CHAPTER XIX

It was night when Barry Houston limped, muscles cramped and frost-bitten, into the little undertaking shop at Tollifer and deposited his tiny burden. Medaine Robinette had remained behind in the care of the snow crews.

"Nameless," he said with an effort, when the lengthy details of certification were asked. "The mother—" and a necessary lie came to his lips—"became unconscious before she could tell me anything except that the baby had been baptized. She wanted a priest."

From far away came the whistles of locomotives, answering the signals of the snowplows ahead. He remembered the bulky cars of machinery at Tollifer. It was partially his battle they were fighting out there. He fumbled aimlessly in his pockets for his gloves. Something ticked on the floor and he bent to pick up the little crucifix with its twisted, tangled chain, forgotten at Tollifer. Dully, hazily, he started at low of your elbow. There ain't no fresh air in that there shed; the minute these engines get inside and start throwin' on the juice, it fills up with smoke. That's what gets you."

Barry climbed to his place on the engine. A whistle sounded, to be echoed and reechoed by the answering blasts of the snowplow train—four engines and the big auger itself—ready now for a fresh sally into the shed. Throttles open, fire boxes throwing their red spluttering glare against the black sky as firemen leaped to their task, the great mass of machinery moved forward.

Faster—faster—then the impact, like crashing into a stone wall. They were within the snowshed now, the auger boring and tearing and snarling like some savage venting his anger against the solid mass which faced it. Inch by inch for eight feet it pressed; then progress ceased, while the play ahead thrilled the triple signal to back up. The engineer opened the cab window and gratefully sucked in the fresh, clean air.

"Eight feet—that's all," he mused.

"Eight feet at a time."

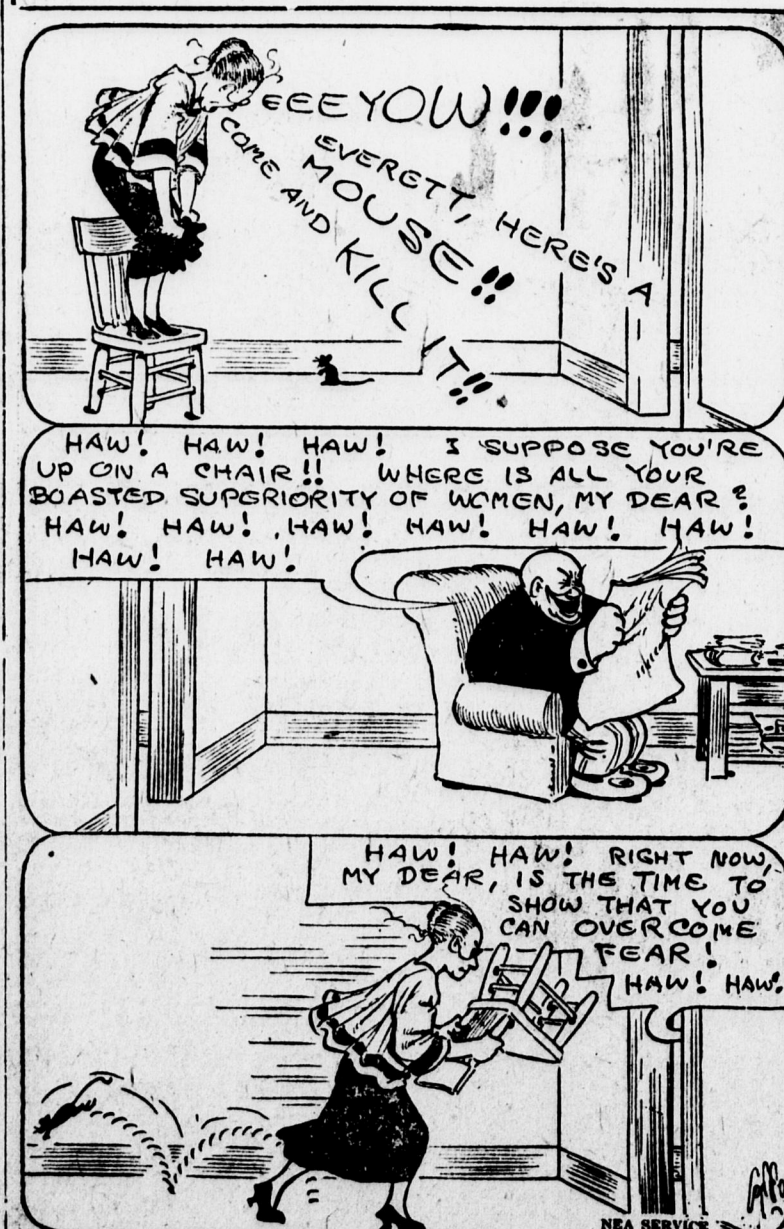

Back and forth—back and forth—fresh air and foul air—gleaming lights, then dense blackness—so the hours passed. Sally after sally the snowplow made. Men fell groveling, only to be dragged into the open air and resuscitated, then sent down once more into the cruelty of the fight. The hours dragged by like stricken things. Then—with dawn—the plow churned with lesser impact. It surged forward. Gray light broke through at the end of the tunnel. The grip of at least one snowshed was broken; but there remained twenty more—and the Death Trail—beyond!

The day crew carried the fight on upward, through three of the smaller snowsheds, at last to halt at the long, curved affair which shielded the jutting edge of Mount Talu-chen. The second and third nights were a repetition of the first.

EVERETT TRUE

BY CONDO

Tonight was the last night, the last either in the struggle or in the lives of those who had fought their way upward to the final barricade which yet separated them from the top of the world—the Death Trail.

Smooth and sleek it showed before Houston in the early moonlight, an icy Niagara, the snow piled high above the railroad tracks. Already the plows were assembled. This was to be the fight of fights, there in the moonlight. A quick shoot and a lucky one. Otherwise—the men who went forward to their engines would not speak of it. But there was one who did.

She was standing beside the cook car as Houston passed through. "You'll be with them?"

"On the Death Trail? I expect to."

"They talk of it as something terrible. Why?"

Houston pointed to the forbidding wall of snow. His thick, broken lips numbed in the longest speech he had known in days.

"It's all granite up there. The cut of the roadbed forms a base for the remainder of the snow. When we cut out the foundation—they're afraid that the vibration will loosen the rest and start an avalanche. It all depends whether it comes before—"

She straightened and looked at him with clear, frank eyes. "Mr. Houston," came quietly, "I've been thinking about something all day. I have felt that I haven't been quite fair—that a man who has acted as you have acted since—since I met you this last time that he deserves more of a chance than I have given him. That—"

"I'm asking nothing of you, Miss Robinette."

"I know. I am asking something of you. I want to tell you that I have been hoping that you can some day furnish me the proof—that you spoke of once. I—that's what I wanted to tell you," she ended quickly and extended her hand. "Goodbye. I'll be praying for all of you up there."

Houston answered only with a pressure of his hand. He looked at her with eyes that spoke what his tongue could not say, then he went on—a shambling, dead-tired man, even on awaking from sleep, but a man whose heart was beating with a new fervor. She would be praying for all of them up there at the Trail. And all of them included him.

At the cab of the engine, he listened to the final instructions of the cursing, anxious superintendent, then went to his black work of the shovel. Higher and higher mounted the steam on the gauge; theirs was the first plow, theirs the greatest task. One by one the final orders came—crisp, shouted, cursing commands answered in kind. Then the last query:

"If there's a damn man of you who's a coward, step out! Hear that? If you're afraid—come on—there's no stopping once you start!"

Engine after engine answered, in jeering, sarcastic tones, the belligerent cries of men hiding what pounded hearts, driving down by sheer will-power the primitive desirers of self-preservation. Again the call was repeated. Again it was answered by men who snarled, men who cursed that they might not pray. And with it:

"A-w-w-w—right! Let 'er go!"

U. S. Representative From Pennsylvania, at Large

I was driving through the country, campaigning, one night, and stopped at a small hotel. My horse was an old stager, about as likely to run away as the Washington monument. The negro hostler at the hotel came up and said:

"Has you got a hitchin' rope, Mr. Burke? I'll tie up your horse for you."

"Never mind," I said. "That horse will stand without being tied."

"Yassah," said the darkey, "but won't he stand just as well tied?"

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

One day the telephone rang in the little hickory tree postoffice where Nancy and Nick were working.

"Tingaling—a ling!" it went and Mr. Stamps answered it.

"Hello!" he said sharply, for he was busy and he didn't like to be bothered. Besides he was pretty sure that it was for Stridealong Longstride, who was always getting called up.

"Hello! Hello! Hello!" he shouted again more sharply than ever and rattling the receiver up and down as though he would like to smash the whole business.

"Someone called us," he yelled, and rang as though we were all deaf and—what's that? Long distance! Oh, for goodness sake, tell them to hurry up then! I haven't got all day to wait. Hello! Hello! Who is it? Who? I said, Who is it? Who wants Hickory 917? Yes, this is Hickory 917. Yes! Yes!

Yes! Oh, for goodness sake, hurry up! Who are you? Yes, this is Stamps. Yes, said 'Stamps.' Stickum S. Stamps. Talk a little louder, ho? Talk louder! Louder! Who is it?"

Suddenly Nancy and Nick saw Mr. Stamps put his hand to his head and fall down in a faint.

"He's had bad news!" cried Nancy springing up, while Nick grabbed the telephone receiver to get the message.

Mr. Stamps opened one eye, then the other and slowly sat up.

"No, not bad news," he whispered. "B—but it's the Fairy Queen and I was sassy. I—I'll lose my job. Honestly I didn't know it was her—she—or I wouldn't have been so—you talk to her, Nick."

"Nancy and Mr. Stamps listened. "Yes, this is Nick," said the little boy. "Yes, Your Highness. I'll tell Mr. Stamps you couldn't hear him. He'll be sorry, I know. No, not as busy as last week. Mr. Stridealong Longstride is back and there isn't much for Nancy and me to do now. I beg your pardon, what place did you say? Mix-Up Land! You want us to go and help! All right, we'll come to your palace for orders right away. Goodbye."

"It's all right, Mr. Stamps," he said. "Don't you worry! But say! Nancy and I will have to be leaving you soon."

ARE BUSTLES COMING BACK? HOOP SKIRTS TOO?

Indications All Point That Way

OUR OUR LEFT: THE TIGHT BODICE. THIS GOWN'S OF COMPARATIVELY RECENT DATE—1897. IT'S WORN BY LOUISE HUFF IN "MARY THE THIRD." ON OUR RIGHT: THE BUSTLE. MARGARET LAWRENCE WEARS THIS COSTUME IN "SECRETS." IT'S OF THE PERIOD OF 1888. IN THE CENTER: THE HOOP SKIRT. IN 1867 IT WAS STRICTLY IN STYLE.

By Marian Hale

Are we due for a revival of the hoop skirt? And the bustle? Is the tight bodice coming back? Not many people now living can remember so far in the past as hoops.

The bustle, however, is recalled by nearly everybody. The tight bodice is within the recollection of those hardly yet middle aged.

Indications are that we are going to have the tight bodice with us again. The bustle is something more than a possibility. The hoop skirt, perhaps.

Looks Like It

At a recent ball in New York a fashionable society girl appeared in a gown that reproduced the style of 1870 in all its details.

A smart designer is bringing out taffeta frocks with back trimming that strongly suggests the bustle.

W. C. T. U. Leader Makes Statement

Frankton, Ill., Feb. 17.—Woman's influence in modern politics and her relation to law enforcement is the subject of a special statement issued today by Miss Anna A. Gordon, World and National president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"As the world has grown smaller the ballot has grown bigger," says Miss Gordon.

"Swift methods of communication daily bring us into close touch with the whole world, increase our responsibility and intensify the intelligent enthusiasm with which we strive to make the world better."

"If woman long ago had been limited the privilege of citizenship she might then more reasonably have been forgiven if in her ballot she had seen only the circumference of her home, her community, or even her state or nation. Today, woman's responsibility as a voter is so immeasurably great that whether she realizes it or not her ballot has become international in significance and as big as the world itself."

"The advancement of Christianity in the world has no enemy so potent as the liquor traffic. It, therefore, becomes the paramount duty of Christian women"

As to tight bodices, fashion authorities won't commit themselves, so I called on Mrs. M. L. Thompson, who conducts a school for corset fitters, and asked her if stiff corsets are coming into style again.

"Stiff ones, no," she said, "but corsets, yes indeed."

"Women positively are going back to corsets, gradually, so that they realize what going without them is doing to their figures."

"A good figure is the basis of every costume. Properly corseted in the new light materials, sparsely boned, women can wear whatever gowns they choose. They can return to basques or to the corseting of former days without discomfort, because the modern corset gives slenderness without distorting the form."

"In fact, to achieve the desired uncorseted effect of today, it is necessary to wear a corset."

Not a Statue

"A woman is not a marble statue,"

REPLIES TO ACCUSATION.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 17, 1923. Editor of the Bismarck Tribune:

A news item and a letter signed by E. G. Patterson appearing in the Bismarck Tribune of February 16 have been brought to my attention, and while I do not think the latter deserves an answer, still I believe the public is entitled to the facts.

Mr. Patterson tries to convey the idea both by his letter and by word of mouth to the public that I am the chairman and head of the Workmen's Compensation Bureau. This is not so. I am neither chairman nor manager of the Bureau. The Bureau is composed of five members, three active and two ex-officio. I am one of the active members. All have equal authority. I have no employees, all persons working for the Workmen's Compensation Bureau are employees of the Bureau.

Mr. Patterson is trying to make the public believe that his arrest for violation of the different laws of the state was for violation of the eight-hour law by working girls overtime at the Frazier and other banquets held in his hotel. This is not the case. Mr. Patterson was arrested on two different charges: one of them was for violation of the minimum wage act. This applies to the McKenize dining-room and kitchen help and is for violation of the Minimum Wage Act only. He has consistently refused since its inception to pay the minimum wage as set by the Minimum Wage Conference. The Minimum Wage of $38.56 per month was made on suggestion of representatives of the Hotel Keepers' association as the lowest wage possible for the girls to live on. Mr. Patterson will not pay this wage but has made an agreement which has been signed by his employees voluntarily or otherwise, where tips contributed to these girls by the patrons constitute part of their wage. This, I believe, the public should know so that when they dine at the McKenize hotel they may realize that the tips given to the girls for good service is considered by Mr. Patterson as part of their regular wage.

One of the other complaints against Mr. Patterson is for working female employees in the 150c Cafeteria where no banquets are served seven days a week, three hundred and fifty days in the year, for over one year and a half, without one day off, which is contrary to the eight-hour law. The other complaint is for working his cigar and telephone girls seven days in the week, month in and month out, without a day off. All of the above offenses were committed and the complaints were sworn to prior to the Frazier banquet.

Mr. Patterson in his letter says he "proposes to carry this fight to a finish notwithstanding McDonald has over a million dollars of the people's money in his fund." He no doubt refers to the Workmen's Compensation Fund. Mr. Patterson was arrested for violation of the Minimum Wage Act and the Eight-Hour Law and not for violation of the Workmen's Compensation Act, and when he is fighting the Minimum Wage Department he is fighting the state of North Dakota and not McDonald or the Workmen's Compensation Bureau.

EVERYBODY MUST HAVE A LONG SPRING WRAP

Cape-like lines characterize full length spring wraps. As in one of the models sketched, the irregular hemline is very smart. Circular lines also are popular.

The other sketch is that of a wrap with wide sleeves that are little more than armholes. A deep pleat gives a yolk effect.

Short coats are in favor too. The smartly dressed woman will be sure to have a jacketette this spring, but she'll have it in addition to, not in place of, her long wrap.

Nothing can quite substitute for the full length coat or cape which covers the whole of one's frock so neatly.

Are we due for a revival of the hoop skirt?

Are we due for a revival of the bustle?

Is the tight bodice coming back?

Not many people now living can remember so far in the past as hoops.

The bustle, however, is recalled by merely rather elderly folk.

The tight bodice is within the recollection of those hardly yet middle aged.

Indications are that we are going to have the tight bodice with us again.

The bustle is something more than a possibility. The hoop skirt, perhaps.

Looks Like It

At a recent ball in New York a fashionable society girl appeared in a gown that reproduced the style of 1870 in all its details.

A smart designer is bringing out taffeta frocks with back trimming that strongly suggests the bustle.

"As to tight bodices, fashion authorities won't commit themselves, so I called on Mrs. M. L. Thompson, who conducts a school for corset fitters, and asked her if stiff corsets are coming into style again."

"Stiff ones, no," she said, "but corsets, yes indeed."

"Women positively are going back to corsets, especially as soon as they realize what going without them is doing to their figures."

"A good figure is the basis of every costume. Properly corseted in the new light materials, sparsely boned, women can wear whatever gowns they choose. They will return to basques or to the crinoline of former days without discomfort, because the modern corset gives slenderness without distorting the form."

"In fact, to achieve the desired uncorseted effect of today, it is necessary to wear a corset."

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

AN EXPENSIVE DAY!

If the house of representatives is to duplicate its session of yesterday the "economy session" will be pretty expensive for the taxpayers.

For the house of a certainty cost the taxpayers more than $1,000,000 in the next two years in its action on one bill and if its action on another bill is confirmed it will cost the taxpayers at least $500,000, and probably much more.

The house favored H. B. 233, which would abolish the highway commission and decline federal road aid, by large enough vote to pass the measure. The economy cry prompted many to vote for the bill. And what will be the result?

There is about $1,000,000 of road work under contract on the federal aid plan. The work must be done or the state's faith with contractors broken and exhaustive litigation entailed. Of this $1,000,000 the federal government would pay $500,000. The house declined federal aid. The taxpayers must dig up the $500,000 the state would get from the federal government.

Of the $500,000 obtained from the federal government the taxpayers of the state pay in federal taxes not more than $15,000. The bulk of it is from the older and more wealthy states of the east.

It was pleaded for a cessation of road work for two years. But did the house actually provide for such cessation? It did not. It has not even suggested a bill to limit the road expenditures of counties and townships, where the bulk of the money has been spent even under the federal aid plan. The result, if anything, will be to increase county and township road building, and without the aid of money from the federal government. The highway commission must continue while existing contracts are unfinished, so there can be little saving there.

The house in another action killed H. B. 33, which would reduce the 3 cent flat acreage hail insurance tax to 1 cent. This would have effected a saving of $540,000 a year, the house was told, or more than a million in the next two years.

There might be good objection to the bill in normal times. But this legislature is an "economy session." The hail insurance fund created by the 3-cent tax is a surplus; to enable the department to pay warrants in cash. The department already has a large surplus; a 1-cent an acre tax would increase it rapidly. The 3-cent tax amounts to about 20 per cent of the entire state tax levy.

Yet with hail warrants being sold almost at par under the agreement made by the Industrial Commission and the Commissioner of Insurance, only about $1,000,000 out of the total outstanding of $2,600,000 have been sold by the farmers. Either they have disposed of them through other means or they prefer to wait until they are payable and collect the interest.

Under this circumstance it would seem that no injury could have been done the hail insurance department by passage of this bill. The taxpayers would have been saved more than $1,000,000 in two years.

One day's work in the lower house thus costs the taxpayers $1,500,000. An expensive day!

EFFECTIVE SERVICE

Dispatches received in Bismarck state that the warning sent them by the weather bureau saved from destruction thousands of dollars worth of livestock which farmers were enabled to get to cover.

Because of the tricks which the unruly elements play at times on the scientific forecasts of the weather bureau, too often the value of the service is not realized. If hundreds of head of livestock were saved from destruction during the storm the local weather bureau has justified the expense of its maintenance for many a day. And in addition it is probable that thousands of dollars were saved shippers by receiving notice not to send out perishable goods to be lost in blocked railroad trains.

The weather service of the government, expending over the entire United States and Canada, is a remarkable achievement in scientific organization, and the result of the warning given in anticipation of this week's storm shows that its benefits are not confined to warning people of the danger of running into a shower on a picnic party.

WIDOWS

The census shows America has over three and a half million widows. You'd have lost money if you had been betting on the total without knowing it.

How many of those widows and their children were left amply provided for when the man of the house passed on?

Most husbands and fathers do a fairly good job, at providing for their families, on this side of the grave. Few of them carry enough insurance, probably because death seems far off until a few hours or days before the last heart-beat.

MISTAKEN

Our so-called flappers (a word now almost obsolete) are the product of the dry climate of America. So claims Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson, English writer and actress, arrived in New York on a lecture tour. She thinks our dry, stimulating climate keeps us keyed up too highly.

Didn't we have the same sort of climate when grandma was a quiet and demure young lady? However, Mrs. Forbes-Robertson's idea will be gladly accepted by many, especially the ones who are always seeking an alibi outside themselves.

DINOSAUR

The skull of a dinosaur, giant beast said to have lived five million years ago, is dug up by scientists of American Museum of Natural History.

Some of these prehistoric monsters were as large as a small bungalow. They become extinct by wandering into swamps from which they could not extricate themselves. Aesop could have written a good fable about this, applying it to human careers. The moral would be: Watch your step, every minute.

NO PEACE IN IRELAND

The responsibility for the continuing of civil war in Ireland is once more clearly fixed. The police proposal of Richard Mulcahy, the minister of defense, who has offered amnesty to all rebels who on February 18 have surrendered their arms, has been rejected by the chief of the republican forces. The last elections proved conclusively that Ireland wants peace and that she is content with peace on the terms of the Free state treaty. Unfortunately, wanting peace and getting it are two different matters. So long as there exists a band of determined and desperate men to break it. We wish profoundly that we could sympathize with these rebels, for then we might at least feel that Ireland is not suffering in vain, but we do not see that there is a great enough difference in the degree of liberty offered Irishmen in the Free State and that which they would enjoy in the Republic to justify the continued shedding of blood and destruction of property.

The Free State pacification of Ireland is far from complete. A policy of reprisal has succeeded in forcing abandonment of nearly all the killing, but no way has yet been found to protect property against the guerrilla bands which terrorize towns and countryside alike with the torch. This is by no means to say that no progress has been made, for there have been many important defections from the irregular forces. Liam Deasy, de Valera's chief deputy, now a prisoner under death sentence, has himself appealed to the republicans to stop their senseless and needless bloodshed and to accept the Free State proposal was conveyed to the chief of the republican forces. The Freeman's Journal also reports that 600 prisoners at Limerick have asked for an "opportunity to press on their leaders the futility of a war of extermination."

But complete peace does not appear to be the happy lot of Ireland just yet. The real tragedy does not lie so much in the civil war itself, but in its fatality. That the Republic is most unlikely, but in the event they do, behind the Free State is the whole power of the British Empire. The issue is immediate peace and liberty within the Empire, or as the Republicans themselves have put it "a war of extermination."

A PREHISTORIC CLOAK

A cloak of wooden cloth, believed to be 3,000 years old, has been found in a peat bog in Sweden. The slightly acid water of the peat formation acted as a preservative. This is the oldest complete garment ever found in Europe, though the British museum has several bits of cloth that are considered still older. But 3,000 years is a fairly respectable age. When that cloth was woven, Homer's father of grandfathers was a boy, playing in the streets of some Greek town. The Israelite monarchy was not yet thought of, Saul, its first king, probably was not yet born. Egypt, too, had not yet been discovered. The defenseless of Rome lay father in the future than the landing of the Pilgrims now lies in the past. Through most of Europe, bronze, rather than iron, was the chosen metal.

Yet even in this misty distant time the northern barbarians either wore wooden cloaks for themselves or carried on trade enough to buy them from more advanced peoples. A good many of the arts of civilization date farther back than our grandfathers dreamed, and were more widely diffused. — Chicago Journal.

Fellowship of Prayer

Daily Lenten Bible reading and meditation prepared for Commission of Evangelism of Federal Council of Churches.

SATURDAY The Forgiveness of Sins

Son, thy sins are forgiven," Mark 2:5.
Read Mark 2:1-12.
"But to the mind of Jesus no loss which may come to the body compares with the loss which comes to the soul by breaking the law of God."

MEDITATION: Jesus never speculated about the philosophy of sin. He regarded it as the most terrible thing that could befall a man—separated from God.

HYMN: Jesus, lover of my soul, let me to thy bosom fly. While the nearer waters roll, While the tempest still is high: Hide me, O my Saviour, hide, till the storm of life is past; Safe into the haven guide, O receive my soul at last.

PRAYER: Lord, our God, the help of those that flee unto thee, deliver us from our sins, and from every thought displeasing to thy goodness, that with a pure heart and a clear soul, we may venture confidently and fearlessly, to pray unto thee. Amen.

BUSINESS BEFORE PLEASURE

"I must go on. I gave my promise."

She nodded.

"It means nothing," he said. "The desert is a dangerous place."

Suddenly the storm lifted for a moment. Far below, miles in reality, straight jets of steam rose high above black, curling smoke; faintly, distinctly, whistles sounded. The snowplows!

He gripped her arms with the sight of it. Nor did she resist. Thrilled, enthralled, they watched it: the whirling smoke, the shooting team of the white spray which indicated the grinding, churning progress of the plows, propelled by the heavy engines behind. From the swollen lips of Houston:

"They've started the fight! I'm going to work with them."

"But—"

He knew what she meant and shook his head.

"No—she does not need me. My presence would mean nothing to her. I can't tell you why. My place is down there."

For an instant Medaine Robinette looked at him with frankly questioning eyes, eyes which told that a question was arising as to his guilt in at least one of the things which circumstances had arrayed against him. But suddenly she was silent as though to divert her thoughts.

"We'll have about three hours. It's our chance. We'll better cut this cord the one in the lead may fall and pull the other one over. We'd better make haste."

Houston stepped before her. A moment later they were edging their way down the declivity of what once had been a railroad track.

"Black dots," they became, dots which appeared in the afternoon to the laboring crews of the snow-fighters far below; dots edging their way forward, then stopping; pulling about beetling precipices, plunging themselves out of the heavier drifts, where drops of 10 and even 20 feet had thrown them. Once, at the edge of an overhanging ledge, he scrambled up, and, faced and feet to a drone in a drift far below, to crawl painfully back to the waiting dot above. Hours! The dots grew larger. Once they came, stumbling, reeling. The woman wavered and fell; he caught her. Then doubling back, a pack on his back, a form in his arms, he came on, his blood-red eyes searching almost sightlessly the hazy air of the waiting, still, grimace-encased men, their thick voice drooping over bloody lips:

"Somebody take her—get her into the bunk cars. She's given out. I'm—I'm all right. Take care of her. I've got to go on—to Tollifer!"

CHAPTER XIX

It was night when Barry Houston limped, muscles cramped and frost-bitten, into the little underground shop at Tollifer and he bent to pick up the little crucifix with its twisted, tangled chain, forgotten at Tollifer. Dully, hazily, he started at it with his red eyes, with the faint feeling of a duty neglected. Then:

"She only said they might want it," he mumbled. "I'm sorry—I should have remembered. I'm always forgetting something."

Then, anxious to take his place in the fighting line, he replaced the tiny bit of gold in his pocket and threaded his way through the circuitous tunnel of snow.

Even from the distance, Barry could hear the surge of the terrific impact, as the rotary smashed against the tight-jammed contents of the shed, snarled and tore at its enemy, then, beaten at last by the erupted ice of the rails, came grudgingly back so that the crews might break the ice from the rails and give traction for another assault.

Houston started forward, only to stop. A figure in the dim light of the rock car had caught his eye, Medaine Robinette.

If the woman back there in the west country only would tell! If she would only keep the promise which she had given him in her half-delirium!

Ten minutes later Barry stood beside a great Mallet engine, a sleek, grayhound of the mountains, taking instructions from the superintendent.

"Know anything about firing an engine?"

"I know enough to shovel coal—and I've got a strong pair of shoulders."

"When you get in them gas pockets, stick your nose in the hole."

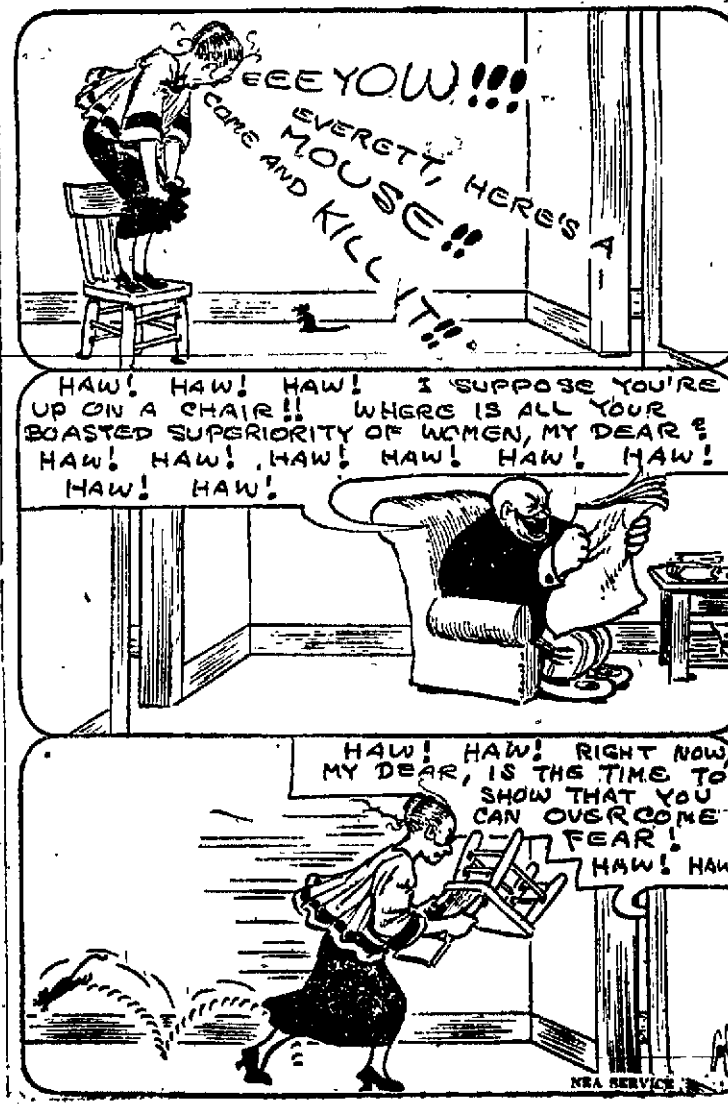

The day crew carried the fight on upward, through three of the smaller snowsheds, at last to halt at the long, curved affair which shielded the jutting edge of Mount Talu-chen.

The second and third nights were a repetition of the first.

EVERETT TRUE

BY CONDO

Tonight was the last night, the last either in the struggle or in the lives of those who had fought their way upward to the final barricade which yet separated them from the top of the world—the Death Trail. Smooth and sleek it showed before Houston in the early moonlight, an icy Niagara, the snow piled high above the railroad tracks. Already the plows were assembled. This was to be the fight of fights, there in the moonlight. A quick shoot and a lucky one. Otherwise—the men who went forward to their engines would not speak of it. But there was one who did.

She was standing beside the cook car, as Houston passed.

"You'll be with them?"

"On the Death Trail? I expect to."

"They talk of it as something terrible. Why?"

Houston pointed to the forbidding wall of snow. His thick, broken lips numbed in the longest speech he had known in days.

"It's all granite up there. The cut of the roadbed forms a base for the remainder of the snow. When we cut out the foundation—they're afraid that the vibration will loosen the rest and start an avalanche. It all depends whether it comes before—or after we've passed through."

She straightened and looked at him with clear, frank eyes. "Mr. Houston," came quietly, "I've been thinking about something all day. I have felt that I haven't been quite fair—that a man who has asked me you this last time—that he deserves more of a chance than I have given him. That—"

"I'm asking nothing of you, Miss Robinette."

"I know. I am asking something of you. I want to tell you that I have been hoping that you can some day furnish me the proof—that you spoke of once. I—that's what I wanted to tell you," she ended quickly, and extended her hand. "Goodby. I'll be praying for all of you up there."

Houston answered—only—with a pressure of his hand. He looked at her with eyes that spoke what his tongue could not say, then he went on—a shambling, dead-tired man, even on awaking from sleep, but a man whose heart was beating with a new fervor. She would be praying for all of them up there at the Tollifer. And all of them included him.

At the cab of the engine, he listened to the final instructions of the cursing, anxious superintendent, then went to his black work of the shovel. Higher and higher mounted the steam on the gauge, theirs was the first plow, theirs the greatest task. One by one the final orders came—crisp, shouted, cursing commands answered in kind. Then the last word:

"If there's a damn man of you who's a coward, step out! Hear that? If you're afraid—come on—there's no stopping once you start!"

Engine after engine answered, in jeering, sarcastic tones, the belligerent cries of men hiding what pounded in their hearts, driving down by sheer will-power the primitive device of self-preservation. Again the cab was repeated. Again it was answered by men who snarled, men who cursed that they might not pray. And with it:

"A-w-w-w—right! Let 'er go!"

U. S. Representative From Pennsylvania, at Large

I was driving through the country, campaigning, one night, and stopped at a small hotel. My horse was an old stager, about as likely to run away as the Washington monument. The negro hostler at the hotel came up and said:

"Has you got a hitchin' rope, Mr. Burt? I'll tie up your horse for you."

"Never mind," I said. "That horse will stand without being tied."

"Yassah," said the darkey, "but won't he stand just as well tied?"

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

One day the telephone rang in the little hickory postoffice where Nancy and Nick were working.

"Tingaling—a-ling!" it went and Mr. Stamps answered it.

"Hello!" he said sharply, for he was busy and he didn't like to be bothered. Besides he was pretty sure that it was for Stridealong, Longstride who was always getting called up.

"Hello! Hello! Hello!" he shouted again more sharply than ever and rattling the receiver up and down as though he would like to smash the whole business.

"Yes, operator!" he yelled.

"Someone called us. The bell rang and rang as though we were all deaf and—what's that? Long distance! Oh, for goodness sake, tell them to hurry up then! I haven't time to wait. Hello! Hello! Who is it? Who is it? Who is it?"

Who wants Hickory 917? Yes, this is Hickory 917. Yes! Yes! Yes! Oh, for goodness sake, hurry up! Who are you? Yes, this is Stamps. Yes, said "Stamps," Stuckum S. Stamps. Talk a little louder! Who's it?"

Suddenly Nancy and Nick saw Mr. Stamps put his hand to his head and fall down in a faint.

"He's had bad news!" cried Nancy springing up, while Nick grabbed the telephone receiver to get the message.

Mr. Stamps opened one eye, then the other and slowly sat up.

"No news at all," he whispered. "But it's the Fairy Queen and I was sassy. I'll lose my job. Honestly I didn't know it was her—she—or I wouldn't have been so you talk to her, Nick."

Nancy and Mr. Stamps listened. "Yes, this is Nick," said the little boy. "Yes, your Highness, I'll tell Mr. Stamps you couldn't hear him. He'll be sorry, I know. No, not as busy as last week. Mr. Stridealong Longstride is back and there isn't much for Nancy and me to do now. I beg your pardon, what place did you say? Mix-Up Land! You want us to go and help! All right, we'll come to your palace for orders right away. Goodby."

"It's all right, Mr. Stamps," he said. "Don't you worry! But, say! Nancy and I will have to be leaving you soon."

SUPPERMEN IN BASEBALL ARE RARE

Cobb, Sisler and Frisch Form Marvelous Trio of Stars

LEFT TO RIGHT: FRANKIE FRISCH, TY COBB, GEORGE SISLER

BY BILLY EVANS.

Suppermen in any branch of sport are mighty rare.

Many seek greatness in the world of sport, but only few achieve it.

Every year the major league call the ranks of the minors, semi-pros and colleges for likely material.

The scouts are instructed not to overlook any player who has ability, regardless of how green or inexperienced he may be.

Every spring fandom is fed up on the possibilities of the recruits. Scores are touted as certain to deliver, yet it is a rarity to dig up a youngster capable of stepping right into a major league berth and making good.

Players like Cobb, Wagner, Sisler, Mathewson and other outstanding stars of the diamond, happen just every so often. Many a recruit is touted as a second Cobb or Wagner only to fade out when put to the real test.

Fans Like Big Thrill.

The big thrill in baseball is the unexpected. The flashy players like Cobb provide the thrill. No one will deny that Cobbs in baseball are few and far between.

Only recently, in commenting on the great players of the game, John McGraw, famous manager of the New York Giants, paid Cobb a real compliment by saying:

"Cobb is one of the greatest players the game has ever produced. The secret of his success is in doing the unexpected. He is always on the offensive, doing things that will test the metal of other players."

Cobb for years has enjoyed the honor of being the most versatile player in baseball—a player capable of doing everything as near perfect as it is possible for a human being to perform.

When Father Time began to make inroads on Cobb, there flashed on the horizon another brilliant star—George Sisler.

Sisler came direct to the American League from the University of Michigan. In a few months he had proved that he was a great southpaw pitcher. Incidentally, he showed that he could hit, and that he was one of the fastest men in the game. Was it a waste of power to merely use Sisler as a pitcher every fourth day? It was decided in the affirmative and Sisler was made over into a first baseman.

Today he is conceded by all experts to be the premier at that position. He is a wonder in the field, at the bat, and on the bases. Sisler is the logical successor to Ty Cobb when the Georgian decides to give up active play.

Frankie Frisch Arrives.

Now, just as Sisler reaches the height of fame, another marvel steps into the picture—Frankie Frisch of the New York Giants.

Like Sisler, Frisch is one of the few major league players to make good without any minor league experience. Frisch, a collegian, came to the Giants from Fordham.

Frisch has the speed and eye of Cobb and Sisler and can do all things well.

"Frisch is the greatest young player to break into the majors since the days of Cobb." That is the way Hakey Jennings sizes him up.

Who will be the next diamond phenom to vie with Sisler, Cobb and Frisch for baseball honors.

FLAX PRODUCTION IN NORTH MAY BE INCREASED WITHOUT DANGER OF FLOODING MARKET

Director Trowbridge of Agricultural College Sees Bright Future for Industry.

TELLS OF DEMANDS

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 17.—Flax production in North Dakota may be doubled or trebled during the next few years without any danger of flooding the market, while the decreased acreage of other crops resulting might help to increase the price for other products, declared Director T. F. Trowbridge today.

Mr. Trowbridge has just returned from Minneapolis where he attended a conference with the flax development committee, which represents the crushers and other users of flaxseed products. President John Lee Coulter, Dr. H. L. Bolley and Dr. H. L. Walster of the college also attended the conference.

"The flax production of the United States and of North Dakota has been decreasing steadily each year," Dr. Trowbridge continued, "while the consumption of linseed oil has been steadily increasing. While the average consumption of linseed oil for the past ten years has been 65,000,000 bushels, which is equivalent to 26,000,000 bushels of flax, the production of flax during recent years has only been between 10,000,000 and 12,000,000 bushels, and the balance has been imported, mostly as flax, but some as linseed oil. During the year ending Sept. 30, 1922, the total consumption of linseed oil in this country was $1,855,725 gallons, equivalent to more than 32,000,000 bushels of flax, and manufacturers estimate that 35,000,000 bushels of flax will be needed to furnish the requirements for linseed oil this year.

Flax Centers

"The principal flax crushing centers are in Minneapolis and Duluth along the Atlantic coast. The flax crop of the northwest, which is the flax crop of the United States, is crushed at Minneapolis and Duluth, while the eastern manufacturers depend chiefly on imported flaxseed, mostly from the Argentine.

The present tariff on flaxseed is 40 cents per bushel, with a corresponding tariff on linseed oil. Freight rates from the northwest to the Atlantic coast make it impractical to ship our flax there for competition with the Argentine flax, but also make it expensive to ship the Argentine flax to the mills at Duluth and Minneapolis.

"During our recent visit at Minneapolis we inspected one flax-crushing mill that had a capacity of 14,000 bushels per day, but it was only using 6,000 bushels per day, due to inability to secure more flaxseed, and in several cases the mills there have shipped in flax from the Atlantic coast so that they could keep running. If the flax crop in the northwest falls off to such a point that the manufacturers cannot depend on a steady supply, the manufacturers in Duluth and Minneapolis apparently will have to go out of business, and the farmers of this territory will have to ship their flax to the Atlantic coast to compete with Argentine flax.

"Argentine flax sells for about $1.85 per bushel, which, with the tariff, makes a total price of $2.25. Flax was quoted at $2.55 a short time ago in Fargo. In Argentine peasant labor is used, land is cheaper, and flax diseases do not seem to be so prevalent there. These are the reasons why a tariff is necessary to protect our farmers.

Should Be Profitable

"An examination of the situation makes it apparent that in the ordinary course of events, flax should be a more profitable crop for farmers to raise than any crop or product which is exported, since prices for products are exported are based on world prices at the principal point of manufacture minus transportation costs, while prices for any product which is imported, such as flax, are based on world prices plus cost of transportation, and in the particular case, plus the tariff. Flax is ordinarily considered as profitable as wheat when it brings 50 cents more per bushel. At the present time the price for flax is $1.50 per bushel more than wheat and all indications point toward the price staying at a reasonably high level.

"In the past flax has been considered a 'virgin country' crop, due to the fact that after it has been grown for a few years in one locality, diseases develop that take a heavy toll. With the development by Prof. H. L. Bolley of the wilt resistant strains of flax, particularly NDR 14, this situation has been overcome so that flax may be grown on the old land with the assurance that disease will not be the principal factor limiting yield."

11 NEW CASES FILED BEFORE R. R. COMMISSION

Ten Cases Decided During the Past Week, the Record Discloses

The state railroad commission has docketed eleven new cases in the last week, according to the weekly bulletin announced today, and has decided ten cases. The bulletin of the commission includes:

The Great Northern Ry. Co.'s plans and specifications for the new depot at McGregor, N. D., were approved.

The Rugby Light & Power Co. was permitted to file a schedule of rates effective April 1, 1925, reducing their present rates.

The commission feeling it had no jurisdiction in the application of the Hamble-Crete Telephone Co. to divide its lines ordered the files closed.

The complaint of the Citizens of Brantford vs. Great Northern Ry., regarding stockyard conditions, having been satisfied the case is closed.

The application of the Motor Service Co. of Litchville for an increase in rates was granted.

The commission feels it has no jurisdiction in the joint application of C. L. Atwood and the city of Marmarth to buy and sell the electric plant in Marmarth and closed the file.

North Dakota." This survey is also investigating a phosphate rock deposit in the southwestern part of the state. Much of our soil is deficient in phosphate and should this deposit prove of commercial worth it could supply this soil deficiency.

"A newly organized body is the North Dakota Bee Association. This Department has recommended to the legislature an appropriation of $25,000 to complete the eradication of the common barberry in North Dakota. This plant is the one that harbors the spore of the Black Stem Rust, which causes losses in millions and is actually endangering wheat raising in North Dakota. Wheat will always have a place in diversified farming and we are of the opinion there are no better conditions any place for raising wheat than in this state."

MANY MINERS DIE IN DAWSON MINE HORROR

Over 100 men were killed when a terrific explosion took place in the pit of this mine in Dawson, N. M. The explosion which caused the entombment of the miners was so severe that telephone lines were wrecked and the concrete entrance to the mine shattered. In October, 1913, 260 men were killed in a disaster in this mine. This photograph was taken at that time.

14 Killed in Clash; Mexican Strikers Seized

Dempsey Regards First Fight With Miske as Greatest of Career

By NEA Service.

New York, Feb. 17.—"What fight do you regard as the greatest of your career?"

That question was recently put to champion Jack Dempsey.

Off hand one would imagine Jack as saying that his victory over Willard, which won for him the championship, was the big event of his career.

Others might figure the meeting with Carpentier before the biggest crowd and great gate in the history of the sport, as the outstanding bout.

Jack didn't mention either of them in answer to the query.

"My fight with Billy Miske, back in 1918 is the big event in my life as a fighter."

"Miske and I fought 10 rounds. No decision was rendered. Some of the writers gave Miske the edge, others favored me."

"At that time Miske was a commanding figure in the fight game. Some of the experts regarded his bout with me as easy picking. On the contrary I gave Miske plenty of trouble."

"That bout convinced me that some day I would be champion, for had I not stayed 10 rounds with the great Miske, and at that time I was little more than a novice? The same year I also staged a six-round no decision affair with him."

"In less than two years I was champion, winning from Willard, and had also stopped Miske in three rounds shortly afterward."

White Sox Pitching Recruit Makes Good, Then Recommends His Brother

By NEA Service.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—Unquestionably one of the pitching finds of last season in the majors was Ted Blankenship of the Chicago White Sox.

While Blankenship didn't draw many headlines on the sport sheet, and didn't bask in the limelight of a no-hit game as did Robertson, still Kid Gleason regards him as the most promising recruit on the Sox staff.

Blankenship hails from Bonham, Tex. That town gave "Red" Russell to the White Sox. It is said that the same fellow who recommended Russell tipped the Sox off to Blankenship.

No pitcher ever made a more sensational debut than the youngster. Sent into a game in which Detroit had a four or five run lead, as a result of knocking out one of the vets, Blankenship stopped 'em dead. Chicago tied up the game but the recruit twirler was defeated in extra innings.

Near the close of the season Secretary Grabner of the White Sox, enthused over the fine work of Blankenship, asked him if he knew of any other pitchers in Texas who might have a chance.

"The only other one I could recommend is my brother, he is a much better pitcher than me."

Thereupon Grabner burned up the wires until he had the youngest Blankenship signed. That is how the White Sox happen to have the Blankenship boys on the pitching staff. Both look like stars of the future.

What Is Status of Pitcher Danforth; Is His Delivery Illegal?

By NEA Service.

St. Louis, Feb. 17.—Dave Danforth will again be a member of the St. Louis pitching staff in the coming campaign, for a time at least.

Dave Danforth is the mystery man of baseball, an eyesore to every American League umpire.

American League umpires credit Danforth with being able to do more tricks with a baseball than Willie Hoppe can do with the ivory.

In other words, Danforth, in the eyes of Ban Johnson's staff, is always trying to fool the umpires as well as the batters.

Last year Danforth was suspended for 10 days on a complaint of Umpire "Buck" Owens, who caught Dave doctoring the ball, so it is alleged.

The incident not only caused Danforth to be suspended, but drove him to the minors. Sent to Tulsa, in the Western League, he finished in fine style.

Danforth has been brought back to the big show because the Browns need a southpaw. What will be his fate?

Danforth has good speed, always possessed it and lately has developed a fair curve and a good slow ball. He really has enough stuff to get by on without resorting to trickery, but Dave at times can't see it that way.

Last season he pitched a number of games in which the umpires gave him a clean bill of health, but he was unable to stand prosperity and soon went back to his old ways.

caused him to be again relegated to the bench. Then came the trade to Boston.

O'Doul is fast and can hit, and was used in the outfield a few times by New York. However, he expressed a desire to get a chance to pitch when the deal with Boston was made and he is to get it.

"Pennock will help the Yanks," says Chance "he is a steady pitcher who should win many games with a strong club like New York."

"I wanted McMillan for third, that is why I permitted Pennock to get away. In addition I am told that O'Doul has a great deal more stuff and only needs the opportunity to make good."

"He is going to get it. He will either be a star or a sinner at the close of the season because he will be much used."

Chance Figures Sox Got Best Of Yankee Deal

By NEA Service.

Boston, Feb. 17.—Manager Frank Chance of the Red Sox has positively announced that "Lefty" O'Doul will get his cherished wish, a chance to make good as a pitcher.

Carried for three of four years by the Yankees, with the exception of a year spent in the Coast League, O'Doul has been a bench warmer practically all the time.

His great work on the coast, where he won 25 ball games, caused the Yanks to bring him back to the big show. He was counted on as having finally arrived. A bad start

SUPPERMEN IN BASEBALL ARE RARE

BY BILLY EVANS.
Supermen in any branch of sport are mighty rare.
Many seek greatness in the world of sport, but only few achieve it.
Every year the major league call the ranks of the minors, semi-pros and colleges for likely material.
The scouts are instructed not to overlook any player who has ability, regardless of how green or inexperienced he may be.
Every spring fandom is fed up on the possibilities of the recruits. Scores are touted as certain to deliver, yet it is a rarity to dig up a youngster capable of stepping right into a major league berth and making his mark.
Players like Cobb, Warner, Sisler, Mathewson and other outstanding stars of the diamond, happen just every so often. Many a recruit is touted as a second Cobb or Warner only to fade out when put to the real test.
Fans like Big Thrill.
The big thrill in baseball is the unexpected. The flashy players like Cobb provide the thrill. No one will deny that Cobbs in baseball are few and far between.
Only recently, in commenting on the great players of the game, John McMillan, famous manager of the New York Giants, said Cobb a real compliment by saying:
"Cobb is one of the greatest players the game has ever produced. The secret of his success is in doing the unexpected." He is always on the offensive, doing things that will test the metal of other players.
Cobb for years has enjoyed the honor of being the most versatile player in baseball—a player capable of doing everything as near perfect as it is possible for a human being to perform.
When Father Time began to make inroads on Cobb, there flashed on the horizon another brilliant star—George Sisler.
Sisler came direct to the American League from the University of Michigan. In a few months he had proved that he was a great southern pitcher. Incidentally, he showed that he could hit, and that he was one of the fastest men in the game. Was it a waste of power to merely use Sisler as a pitcher every fourth day? It was decided in the affirmative and Sisler was made over into a first baseman.
Today he is considered by all experts to be the premier at that position. He is a wonder in the field, at the bat, and on the bases. Sisler is the logical successor to Ty Cobb when the Georgian decides to give up active play.
Frankie Frisch Arrives.
Now, just as Sisler reaches the height of fame, another marvel steps into the picture—Frankie Frisch of the New York Giants.
Like Sisler, Frisch is one of the few major league players to make good without any minor league experience. Frisch, a collegian, came to the Giants from Fordham.
Frisch has the speed and eye of Cobb and Sisler and can do all things well.
"Frisch is the greatest young player to break into the majors since the days of Cobb." That is the way Hukie Jennings sizes him up.
Who will be the next diamond phenom to vie with Sisler, Cobb and Frisch for baseball honors.

Dempsey Regards First Fight With Miske as Greatest of Career

By NEA Service.
New York, Feb. 17.—"What fight do you regard as the greatest of your career?"
That was the question recently put to champion Jack Dempsey.
Off hand one would imagine Jack as saying that his victory over Willard, which won for him the championship, was the big event in his career.
Other might figure the meeting with Carpentier before the biggest crowd and great gate in the history of the sport, as the outstanding bout.
Jack didn't mention either of them in answer to the query.
"My fight with Billy Miske, back in 1918 is the big event in my life as a fighter."
"Miske and I fought 10 rounds. No decision was rendered. Some of the writers gave Miske the edge, others favored me."
"At that time Miske was a commanding figure in the fight game. Some of the experts regarded him; but with me as easy picking. On the contrary I gave Miske plenty of trouble."
"That bout convinced me that some day I would be champion, for had I not stayed 10 rounds with the great Miske, and at that time I was little more than a novice? The same year I also staged a six-round no decision affair with him."
"In less than two years I was champion, winning from Willard, and had also stopped Miske in three rounds shortly afterward."

White Sox Pitching Recruit Makes Good. Then Recommends His Brother

By NEA Service.
Chicago, Feb. 17.—Unquestionably one of the pitching finds of last season in the majors was Ted Blankenship of the Chicago White Sox.
While Blankenship didn't draw many headlines on the sport sheet, and didn't back in the limelight of a no-hit game as did Robertson, still "Kid" Glascock regards him as the most promising recruit on the Sox staff.
Blankenship hails from Benham, Tex. That town gave "Red" Rusell to the White Sox. It is said that the same fellow who recommended Blankenship to the Sox off to Blankenship.
No pitcher ever made a more sensational debut than the youngster. Sent into a game in which Detroit had a four or five run lead, as a result of knocking out one of the vets, Blankenship stopped 'em dead. Chicago tied up the game but the recruit twirler was defeated in extra innings.
Near the close of the season Secretary Grabner of the White Sox, enthused over the fine work of Blankenship, asked him if he knew of any other pitchers in Texas who might have a chance.
"The only other one I could recommend is my brother, he is a much better pitcher than me."
"Grabner (Grabner) burned up the wires until he had the younger Blankenship signed. That is how the White Sox happen to have the Blankenship boys on the pitching staff. Both look like stars of the future."

What Is Status of Pitcher Danforth; Is His Delivery Illegal?

By NEA Service.
St. Louis, Feb. 17.—Dave Danforth will again be a member of the St. Louis pitching staff in the coming campaign, for a time at least.
Dave Danforth is the mystery man of baseball, an eyesore to every American League umpire.
American League umpires credit Danforth with being able to do more tricks with a baseball than Willie Keppeler can do with the vories. In other words, Danforth, in the eyes of Ban Johnson's staff, is always trying to fool the umpires as well as the batters.
Last year Danforth was suspended for 10 days on complaint of Umpire "Brick" Owens, who caught Dave doctoring the ball, so it is alleged.
The incident not only caused Danforth to be suspended, but drove him to the minors. Sent to Tulsa, in the Western League, he finished in fine style.
Danforth has been brought back to the big show because the Biowins need a southpaw. What will be the fate?
Danforth has good speed, always possessed, and fairly has developed a fair curve and a good slow ball. He really has enough stuff to get by on without resorting to trickery, but Dave at times can't see it that way.
Last season he pitched a number of games in which the umpires gave him a clean bill of health, but he was unable to stand prosperity and soon went back to his old ways.
caused him to be again relegated to the bench. Then came the trade to Boston.
O'Doul is fast and can hit, and was used in the outfield a few times by New York. However, he expressed a desire to get a chance to pitch when the deal with Boston was made and he is to get it.
"Pennock will help the Yanks," says Chance, "he is a steady pitcher who should win many games with a strong club like New York."
"I wanted McMillan for third, that is why I permitted Pennock to get away. In addition I am told that O'Doul has a great deal more stuff and only needs the opportunity to make good."
"He is going to get it. He will either be a star or a flivver at the close of the season because he will be much used."

Chance Figures Sox Got Best Of Yankee Deal

By NEA Service.
Boston, Feb. 17.—Manager Frank Chance of the Red Sox has positively announced that "Lefty" O'Doul will get his cherished wish, a chance to make good as a pitcher.
Carried for three of four years by the Yankees, with the exception of a year spent in the Coast League, O'Doul has been a bench warmer practically all the time.
His great work on the coast, where he won 25 ball games, caused the Yanks to bring him back to the big show. He was counted on as starting finally arrived. A bad start

FLAX PRODUCTION IN NORTH MAY BE INCREASED WITHOUT DANGER OF FLOODING MARKET

Director Trowbridge of Agricultural College Sees Bright Future for Industry.

TELLS OF DEMANDS

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 17.—Flax production in North Dakota may be doubled or trebled during the next few years without any danger of flooding the market, while the decreased acreage of other crops resulting might help to increase the price for other products, declared Director P. F. Trowbridge today.
Mr. Trowbridge has just returned from Minneapolis where he attended a conference with the flax development committee, which represents the crushers and other users of flaxseed products. President John Lee Coulter, Dr. H. L. Bolley and Dr. H. L. Walster of the college also attended the conference.
"The flax production of the United States and of North Dakota has been increasing steadily each year," Dr. Trowbridge continued. "While the consumption of linseed oil has been steadily increasing. While the average consumption of linseed oil for the past ten years has been 65,000,000 gallons, which is equivalent to 25,000,000 bushels of flax, the production of flax during recent years has only been between 10,000,000 and 12,000,000 bushels, and the balance has been imported, mostly as flax, but some as linseed oil. During the year ending Sept. 30, 1922, the total consumption of linseed oil in this country was 81,855,725 gallons, equivalent to more than 32,000,000 bushels of flax, and manufacturers estimate that 35,000,000 bushels of flax will be needed to furnish the requirements for linseed oil this year."
"The principal flax crushing centers are in Minneapolis and Duluth and along the Atlantic coast. The flax crop of the northwest, which is the flax crop of the United States, is crushed at Minneapolis and Duluth, while the eastern manufacturers depend chiefly on imported flaxseed, mostly from the Argentine. The present tariff on flaxseed is 40 cents per bushel, with a corresponding tariff on linseed oil. Freight rates from the northwest to the Atlantic coast make it impractical to ship our flax there for competition with the Argentine flax. But it is so expensive to ship the Argentine flax to the mills at Duluth and Minneapolis.
"During our recent visit at Minneapolis we inspected one flax-crushing mill that had a capacity of 14,000 bushels per day, but it was only running one day a week due to inability to secure more flaxseed, and in several cases the mills there have shipped in flax from the Atlantic coast so that they could keep running. If the flax crop in the northwest falls off to such a point that the manufacturers cannot depend on a steady supply, the manufacturers in Duluth and Minneapolis apparently will have to go out of business, and the farmers of this territory will have to ship their flax to the Atlantic coast to compete with Argentine flax."
"Argentine flax sells for about $1.85 per bushel, which, with the tariff, makes a total price of $2.25. Flax was quoted at $2.68 a short time ago in Fargo. In Argentine peon labor is used, land is cheaper, and flax diseases do not seem to be so prevalent there. These are the reasons why a tariff is necessary to protect our farmers."

"Should Be Profitable
"An examination of the situation makes it apparent that in the ordinary course of events, flax should be a more profitable crop for farmers to raise than any crop or product which is exported, since prices for products are exported are based on world prices at the principal point of manufacture minus transportation costs, while prices for any product which is imported, such as flax are based on world prices plus cost of transportation, and in the particular case, plus the tariff. Flax is ordinarily considered as profitable as wheat when it brings 50 cents more per bushel. At the present time the price for flax is $1.50 per bushel more than wheat, and all indications point toward the price staying at a reasonably high level.
"In the past flax has been considered a 'virgin country' crop, due to the fact that after it has been grown for a few years in one locality, diseases develop and it takes a substantial loss. With the development by Prof. H. L. Bolley of the wilt resistant strains of flax, particularly NDR 134, this situation has been overcome so that flax may be grown on the old land with the assurance that disease will not be the principal factor limiting yield."

DIVERSE FARM OPERATIONS TO BE URGED

Kitchen Also Calls Attention to Possible Development of Other Resources.

REFERS TO SURVEYS

In observance of Diversified Farming Week, Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor J. A. Kitchen has urged that the value of natural resources of the state not be lost sight of. In a statement Mr. Kitchen calls attention to the surveys of possible oil and development in the state. He says:
"The Governor of the State of North Dakota has designated in a proclamation that the week of February 12-19, 1923 be observed as a week of diversified farming and co-operative marketing.
"The Department of Agriculture and Labor, together with its Dairy Division and Farmer's Institute Corps, will join with other agricultural agencies in instructions in phases of agriculture that will tend to develop a feeling for more diversified farming operations in North Dakota.
"In keeping with the spirit of a Diversified Farming Week the natural resources of the state should not be forgotten. We were recently discussing the geological structures in North Dakota with Professor Simpson Leonard and Dove of the University at the Geology Department at the University has charge of the geological survey of North Dakota. They have surveyed coal beds in North Dakota where there are lignite, coal, deposits approximately one-half trillion of tons. No mind can conceive what a tremendous amount this is. This survey includes two beds of coal near Sand Creek in Slope County where one vein is 35 feet and another 38 feet thick and each bed contains two billion tons of lignite.
"To those interested in the possibilities of Oil and Gas in North Dakota we suggest they visit Professor A. G. Leonard, University, North Dakota, for Bulletin entitled, 'Possibilities of Oil and Gas in "This survey is also investigating a phosphate rock deposit in the southwestern part of the state. Much of our soil is deficient in phosphate and should this deposit prove of commercial worth it could supply this soil deficiency."

"A newly organized body is the North Dakota Bee Association.
"This Department has recommended to the legislature an appropriation of $25,000 to complete the eradication of the common barberry in North Dakota. This plant is the one that harbors the spore of the Black Stem Rust, which causes losses in millions and is actually endangering wheat raising in North Dakota. Wheat will always have a place in diversified farming and we are of the opinion there are no better conditions any place for raising wheat than in this state."

Avert Coal Famine; Soo Breaks Thru

The coal famine which has held Bismarck in its grip during the recent blizzard was broken today when the Soo train broke through to Williston and brought a train load of 24 car of lignite from the Washburn Lignite Coal company to Bismarck. Not a dealer in town had any lignite coal left in his place of business. It was reported and a number of places, among them the Hughes Electric Light Co., had either no coal at all or had obtained other varieties. Every effort is being exerted by the Washburn Lignite company to deliver coal to places at a number of points in the Slope region.

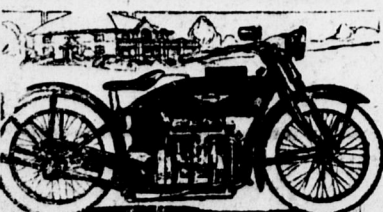

Rush deliveries will be made in Bismarck tomorrow in cases that are absolutely necessary.

CHEVROLET SALES GOOD
Chevrolet sales are running ahead of all previous records, according to S. W. Corwin who just returned from the Minneapolis Automobile Show. The annual dealer convention was held in the Gold Room at the Radisson Hotel attended by over 300 men. Novel cabaret actors were offered during the banquet, and a one-act play was put on at the close describing the usual methods of a small town dealer in selling an automobile and what happened after he tried modern ideas in his business.

Mr. Corwin said that perhaps the most interesting information he picked up at the convention was the conversation he had at dinner with a Chevrolet dealer living in a town of 3500 people in southern Minnesota. This dealer has a territory eighteen miles long and twelve miles wide. He said that since the first of November he had taken forty Chevrolet and but three of them were on hand. In fact the Minneapolis branch was unable to give him all the cars he ordered in January. This bears out the contention that there will be a serious shortage this spring.

Statistics were given at the convention showing that in two states and in 146 counties Chevrolet now

MANY STARS IN PIDGIN'S FAMOUS STORY

Through the efforts of Arthur Sawyer of Sawyer-Lubin Pictures organization, which produced the Metro-SL Special "Quincy Adams Sawyer," at the Capitol Theatre, one of the most notable lists of screen players ever assembled for a single production appears in the film version of Charles Felton Pidgin's famous story.

When the initial preparations were being made for transferring this story of New England life to the screen, Mr. Sawyer announced that he would obtain the most distinguished cast possible. For six weeks he worked with Clarence G. Badger, director of the photoplay, to this end; and as a result secured the services of sixteen players whose names are familiar to every motion picture fan.

Among these sixteen is Blanch Sweet, who returns to the screen after an absence of almost two years. She enacts the leading feminine role, that of Alice Pettingill. John Bowers has the title part; Lon Chaney is seen as Obadiah Strout, czar of Mason's Corner. Barbara La Marr plays Linda Putnam, the small-town vampire. Elmo Lincoln is cast for Abner Stiles, the blacksmith. Louise Fazenda has a comedy role, that of Mandy Skinner, the "sauciest girl in Mason's Corner."

Other leading parts are taken by equally notable screen players, including Edward Connelley, Claire McDowell, Joseph Dowling, Zasu Pitts, Hank Mann, June Elvidge, Victor Potel, Kate Lester, Harry Davenport and Millie Davenport.

Besides assembling a cast of celebrities, the S-L company laid plans for a most elaborate production of this story, based on the book that more than 10,000,000 people have read. A New England village was constructed on the Metro studio grounds; and plans were drawn for many other typical New England settings, which included everything from the interior of the fashionable Sawyer mansion in Boston to the blacksmith shop in Mason's Corner.
